Table of Contents

1. Visitors
2. SUNNY!!
3. First Date
4. Sunkat
5. I won't say I'm in Love
6. Keeping Secrets
7. Hatching Day
8. Introductions
9. Making Friends
10. Surprise!
11. Growing Up
12. New Feelings
13. Sisterly Love
14. Trouble
15. Worried Sick
16. Coming Home
17. Different
18. Falling Hard
19. Replacement
20. Panicking
21. Scorpions Tale
22. Visiting Day
23. Feeling Fine
24. Hearts Full Of Love
25. Proposal
26. Happier
27. Confiding
28. HeartBreak
29. The Meeting
30. Settling In
31. Eclipse
32. Memories
33. Explanation Page (No Story)
34. Sleet

35. Explanation Page (Again)
36. Hidden
37. Fallen In Love
38. I can't
39. Gone
40. Going Home
41. Sunstar
42. Adventure
43. Mirage
44. The Final Part

Visitors

[image]

Glory was stretched out on a platform, enjoying the sun on her side. Her scales were a pale blue color, which meant calm. Glory didn't get to be calm very often anymore. Between the problems between the Rainwings and Nightwings that sometimes popped up, the stress of ruling two tribes fairly, and how annoying her bodyguard Deathbringer could be, Glory had a lot of mixed emotions, and calm was not usually one of them. Her emotions usually included:

Annoyed

Angry

Irritated

Frustrated

Impatient

As Glory thought about this, a thump on her platform made her look up. A familiar black dragon with a smug look on his face was sitting on the edge of her platform, tail tucked neatly over his talons. "What?" Glory growled, and Deathbringer smirked. "You don't remember do you?" He asked, and Glory frowned. "Remember what?" She asked. Suddenly Tsunami, Sunny, Clay, and Starflight jumped up onto her platform. "Ohhhhhh." Glory said before being tackled by Sunny. "Ack!" Glory screeched before Clay pulled Sunny off of her. Deathbringer had an amused look on his face, so Glory stomped over to him and shoved him off the platform. He flailed for a little before remembering that he had wings, then flew back up to the platform. "Go away." Glory snapped, and Deathbringer put a talon over his heart. "But I'm your-" Glory pushed him again before he could finish his sentence. Tsunami snickered, and Glory remembered that her friends were here. She bounded over to them to say hello. She was happy to see them, it had been almost six months. "Aren't you supposed to be running a school?" Glory asked, and Tsunami waved her off. "We decided to start Spring Break early so that we could come see you!" She said. "Is there anything new for you guys?" Glory asked. Sunny gave her a sly smile, glancing at Tsunami. "Sunny don't you dare." Tsunami warns Sunny. "TSUNAMI'S DATING RIPTIDE!" Sunny blurts out, bouncing on her talons. Tsunami glares, Sunny gives her a teasing smirk which is almost impossible for Sunny, and Glory smiles. "Really?!" Tsunami nods. Somebody clears their throat. "What now Deathbringer?" Glory asks as she turns around. The black dragon is hanging by his tail from an overhead branch. "You have more visitors." He says, swinging back and forth. "Who?" Glory asks, curious. "Some friends." Deathbringer says vaguely. Glory sighs impatiently. "Just tell me who it is." Deathbringer shrugs. "Well, maybe not your friends, but the others friends." He says, and Glory growls. "WHO IS IT?" She yells, and four dragons pop up. "Riptide!" Tsunami cries, going to stand by her boyfriend. The other dragons are Fatespeaker, Meerkat, and Peril, who hovers above the platform so she doesn't light it on fire. Fatespeaker goes over to Glory and gives her a hug. "Hey Glory." Fatespeaker says. "Hey!" Glory replies. "What are you guys doing here?" Meerkat shrugs. "We don't have anything to do really right now, and the rainforest is cool." He says. Just then Silver swings down from a branch onto Glory's head. "AHHHH WHAT IS THAT THING?" Meerkat creams, jumping back. Glory laughs. "It's just a sloth." Meerkat's pale Sandwing scales turn slightly red. "Oh." He says, laughing nervously. Sunny laughs and twines her tail with his. "Don't be such a dragonet Meerkat." She says. He smiles. Deathbringer comes up behind Glory and jumps on her, knocking her down. "Hey!" Glory protests, pushing him off with her hind legs. He smirks, and for once, Glory doesn't care. She'd never felt that way before around Deathbringer, or maybe she had. But she didn't know what it was. Glory jumped at Deathbringer, sending them tumbling off the platform. Glory flared her wings, catching herself but being pulled down by Deathbringer. He yanks her down near him so that they are wrapped in each other. Then he kisses her.

Hey guys! Okay, so I know this chapter isn't the best and there isn't a lot of Deathbringer until near the end, but I hope you like it. And don't worry, there will be more of Deathbringer in the next chapters. Comment if you ship Glorybringer! Also, just a quick note, I am thinking about doing a series with the Jade Winglet, and the first one I already have in mind. Qibli and an Icewing I created named Flurry. Anyway, thanks for reading!

SUNNY!!

[image]

Glory pulled back in surprise. What had just happened? Deathbringer smiled at her, a cute smile that Glory loved. WHAT? Since when have I ever thought that? Looking past Deathbringer, she saw that they were nearing the ground. "Deathbringer!" She yelped, throwing out her wings. He did the same, and they floated down to the ground side by side. As soon as they touched down, Glory whirled to face Deathbringer. "Why did you do that?" She demanded, and he just shrugged. "Why not?" Glory face-taloned. "Seriously? Did you really just say 'Why not'?" Deathbringer smirked, and Glory felt her scales flush pink. She quickly changed them to her usual green, red , and blue. Deathbringer's smirk seemed even more smirky now. Glory glared at him. Tsunami fluttered down to them before Glory could respond. "Wow, Glory, you've got it bad." She said, and Glory turns her glare to Tsunami. "What?" Glory snarls. Tsunami smiles. "I could see that flash of pink from your platform." She says, and Glory groans. Deathbringer frowns. "What does pink mean?" He asks, and Sunny, who Glory had not realized was there, giggles. "It means she likes you." Sunny drew out the word likes so it sounded singsongy. Glory turns bright pink again, her face flushed. "Well, um,-" She starts, but she doesn't have anything else to say. "That confirms it!" Sunny says, then turns to Tsunami. "I TOLD you Glorybringer would happen! Now pay up!" Tsunami put a bracelet in Sunny's hand that was pale blue pearls. Sunny slips it on. "I feel better already!" She says, turning to Glory with shining eyes. "Huh?" Glory asks. "The bracelets enchanted." Sunny explained. "I didn't mean for the bracelet, I meant for before that." Glory snaps, and Sunny's eyes turn mischievous. "GLORYBRINGER FOR LIFE!" Sunny yells, and Glory blushes. "What?" Sunny rolls her eyes. "Imma shipper, remember? Glorybringer is your ship name, 'cause I SO SHIP YOU!" Deathbringer smiles, then walks over to sit next to Glory, twining their tails. Glory only flashes pink for a moment, but it's enough for another Sunny remark. "SEE! I told you! Glory + Deathbringer is soooooo perfect!!" Glory glares. "If you say one more thing about whatever you're talking about, I will venom you." She threatens, but Sunny is just too happy to notice. "Glory and Deathbringer, flying in the sky, getting all K.I.S.S.Y!" "SUNNY!" Glory yells, jumping up and running at Sunny. Sunny shrieks and flies up to the platform where everyone else is, and when Glory gets up, Sunny is sheltered in Meerkats wings. "Sunny!" Glory said, and Sunny just laughed. Soon, Glory is laughing too. The anger and embarrassment are gone, and now Glory thinks it's funny, (and also true) alongside Sunny. Deathbringer flies up to the platform, sitting next to Glory yet again. Glory shoves him playfully to the side, and as he falls he reaches out and grabs Glory's tail for balance. "Ack!" Glory yelps as Deathbringer falls and takes Glory down with him. It's a pile, Glory on top of Deathbringer. He flashes a smile. "Hello." He says, and Glory slaps him with one of her wings. Standing up, she shakes herself off and resumes a queenly position. Deathbringer mimics her, sitting up tall and straight with his tail over his talons. Glory sighs. "What am I going to do with you?" "Love me to death?" Deathbringer suggests, and Glory smacks him with her wing. Looking around, Glory sees her friends reactions to the many events of the afternoon. Tsunami was smirking, Riptide looked happy, probably because he was with Tsunami, Starflight looked slightly uncomfortable, Fatespeaker looked happy, probably because she liked to ship with Sunny. Sunny was having way to much fun watching Deathbringer and Glory argue, Meerkat was watching Sunny with a look Glory knew well. That's how Deathbringer looked when he saw Glory. And Glory had a feeling that that was what she looked like when she looked at him. Clay was sitting on the platform, completely oblivious, enjoying a piece of fruit. Peril was wearing her enchanted necklace from Turtle that allowed her to switch her firescales on and off, so she was sitting next to Clay, curled up at his side. Deathbringer twined his tail with Glory's, and she realized how much she loved having him near her. Maybe, just maybe, Sunny is right.

Hey! Real quick, the italics are Glory's thoughts. What do you think of the chapter? I know it's not the best, but I think it's better than the last one. And I had a lot of fun making Sunny the Shipper. Anyway, hope you like it, another update should be coming soon! (One more thing; None of the art is mine, so I don't take credit for any of it!)

Flappy Seal

First Date

[image]

Glory is sitting outside of her hut when a black dragon comes swooping down. Her friends had left that morning, and now the early afternoon sun was rising into the sky. Deathbringer lands with a flare of his wings, trying to be dramatic, but trips over his tail and ends up sprawled on his back. Glory smiles, letting her scales turn pink. Deathbringer jumps up and tries to put his wing over Glory, but she steps away. "What do you want?" She asks, trying to be stern. But when he smiles at he, she can't help it. She relaxes, twining her tail with his. They weren't officially dating, but now that feelings were out in the open, Glory found no point in restricting herself. Deathbringer cleared his throat. "I came to ask you if, um, you wanted to go onadatewithmetonight?" He said the last part so fast Glory couldn't understand what he was saying. "What?" He takes a deep breath. "Do you want to go on a date. With me. Tonight." He said, the last part choppy. Glory turns her scales to a light, pretty pink purposefully before nodding and pecking his cheek. The she shoves him off the platform. "See you tonight!" He called as he righted himself and flew off. I'm really glad that Sunny isn't here right now.

Glory was just adjusting the flower she had decided to put on when Deathbringer showed up. "Wow." was all he said when he saw Glory. Her scales flushed pink, and his smirk returned. "I, uh, brought you this." It was a red rose. Glory gasped. "Those don't grow here? How did you-" Deathbringer cut her off with a kiss. "Anything for my queen." He said softly, twining their tails. Glory smiled sweetly at him. "So, where are we going?" Deathbringer smiled wide. "It's a surprise. Follow me." He said, then took off, Glory right behind him. They swerved through the night sky, spiraling around each other, the stars and moons glowing brightly, illuminating the two dragons. Finally, Deathbringer landed at a gentle waterfall with a clear pool in the center. Surrounded by flowers of all sorts, fruit trees growing in the most random places, Glory loved it. Then she spotted them. A patch of roses of three colors. Green, red, and blue. My colors. Glory realized. A small hut was at one end of the pool, up on stilts so that no water splashed inside. "Deathbringer, what is this place?" Glory asked, looking at the handsome dragon beside her. He smiles. "You like it?" "Are you serious? I love it!" Glory breathes, staring into Deathbringer's dark eyes. "How did you find this?" Glory asks, and Deathbringer traces something in the ground with his talon. "Well, I found the waterfall and the hut, and, I just thought it would be perfect." He said. "Perfect for what?" Glory asks, twining her tail with Deathbringers. "For us." He says simply, but it is enough for Glory. She lays down on the soft grass, Deathbringer beside her. She cuddles up close to him, so that she can feel his scales, smooth and warm. He puts a wing protectively over her. "I think I'd like that." Glory says, and Deathbringer brightens up, eyes shining. "You mean it?" He asks, and Glory nods. "Not right now, but maybe someday." She says, and Deathbringer leans down towards her. Glory welcomes the kiss, enjoying the feel of Deathbringer's smooth snout against hers. After they pulled away, Glory realized how tired she was. Yawning, she curls down into Deathbringer and closes her eyes. She could've sworn she heard Deathbringer say, "I love you, Glory." before she drifted off to sleep.

Hey guys! So, I know this chapter is kinda short, but I wanted to end it at the right moment! Lots of Glorybringer in this chapter, I absolutely love it, but be expecting a visit from Sunny the Shipper soon. Have fun with it! Later!

Flappy Seal

Sunkat

[image]

Quick note- This chapter is from the perspective of Sunny, not in the rainforest, but I had to add some Sunkat somewhere! Other than Glorybringer, Sunkat is my favorite ship! This chapter might be shorter or longer, I'm not sure, but I hope you enjoy it!!

Flappy Seal

Sunny sat in her room at the Sand Palace. After leaving the rainforest yesterday, there was still three days left in Spring Break for Jade Mountain, so the DoD had a little while longer away from the school. Sunny had decided it might be good to visit her mother, Queen Thorn, and she also maybe wanted to spend some more time with Meerkat. Yeah, he had been in the rainforest with them, but Sunny had spent most of her time ranting about ships and Glorybringer, which, by the way was still her favorite ship other than Sunkat. (Yes, Sunny shipped herself.). And Sunny knew that she liked Meerkat. I mean, she had been trying to tell him with little gestures like twining tails, or hiding in his wings, but Meerkat didn't seem to show any signs of affection towards her. Sunny decided that she needed to do something, so she went to her mother's room and told her she was going out. "Where?" Thorn asked. Sunny shrugged. "Here and there. Get to know the subjects, you know, 'cause I'm your heir." Thorn nodded. "Alright you can go, but be back soon." Sunny smiled and hugged her mother before racing outside and springing into the air. She flew to Possibility, where she knew Meerkat would be. She was lucky to find him sitting at the entrance, and she watched him until he saw her. His face lit up, and it gave Sunny a glimmer of hope that maybe he did like her, but she released it quickly. She would tell him today, and that would solve all other problems, or make new ones. Hopefully not the latter. "Hey!" Meerkat said, wrapping Sunny in his wings.

She felt her heart leap. "Hi." She said, pulling back and twining tails with him. He looked down. "Hey Sunny, I've been meaning to tell you something." Sunny felt her heart stop. "What?" She said, quiet and nervous. Meerkat starts fidgeting with his talons. "I like you Sunny." He said, glancing up at Sunny to see her shocked expression. "I, Meerkat, I like you too!" She said, flinging herself at Meerkat. He catches her, wrapping her up in his wings. "I'm glad." He whispered, and Sunny smiled. Looking up at him, she knew what she had to do. Leaning up towards him, she pressed her snout against his. He looked surprised at first, but he didn't pull away. Sunny pulled back, smiling. "That was something I've wanted to do for a while." She said, then she lifted her head to the bright blue sky and yelled, "SUNKAT LIVES!!"

Hey! I had to do a Sunkat, it's short and I'll be back to Glorybringer in the next chapter. How do you like it? I think it turned out pretty well, even though it's only 480 words. Anywho, keep reading, have fun with it, later.

Flappyseal

I won't say I'm in Love

[image]

Glory yawned, stretching her wings. Deathbringer was still sleeping peacefully. Looking around, Glory forgot where she was for a moment. Oh, right. We're at the waterfall. After the date. Glory smiled as she remembered the date. Glory and Deathbringer flying through the night sky, curled up in Deathbringer's wings to sleep, the kiss, and of course, the maybe 'I love you' that had come from Deathbringer. Glory went and got a drink from the pool before flying over to the hut to look inside. There were two beds, plus three or four smaller beds. A water basin and a woven mat were in the center of the room, and in a small box was an assortment of fruit. Glory sat down, taking in the sight. She decided that the smaller beds were for dragonets, and she smiled and shivered at the same time. Dragonets. With Deathbringer. "Do you like it?" A familiar voice said behind her. Glory turned and walked over to Deathbringer, brushing his wingtips and twining tails. "It's perfect." She said. Deathbringer smiled, leaning in for a kiss, but a furry thing drops onto his snout before he can. "WHAT IS ON MY NOSE!?" He screamed, jumping at batting at the furry bundle that was clinging to his snout. Glory shook her head. "It's Silver, dummy. You know, my sloth?" Deathbringer calmed down, sliding Silver off his nose and onto the ground. "Oh, yeah. Silver." He said, looking embarrassed. Glory kissed him, then threw Silver onto her back with her tail. "Come on, lets go back home." She said, and Deathbringer frowned. "Why?" Glory rolled her eyes. "Because I am a Queen, and I can't just leave my kingdom?" Deathbringer frowned again. "Oh yeah." Glory grabbed his talon and pulled him up into the air with her, bumping his side along the way. When they reached the rainforest, Glory put down Silver and headed towards her hut where, to her surprise, Sunny, Meerkat, Tsunami, Riptide, Clay, and Starflight were waiting. "Hi!" Sunny cried as Glory landed. "Hi.." Glory said slowly, worried that Sunny would start talking about Glorybringer again. Sunny was bouncing up and down. "Guess what? I have some great news! I have a boyfriend!" Sunny said, and Meerkat blushed beside her. Glory raised an eyebrow.

"Oh?" Sunny nodded, then looked from Glory to Deathbringer. "What about you? I mean, you weren't here when we got here, and neither was he, so where were you?" Glory wasn't going to answer, but Deathbringer did. "We were on a date." He said smugly, smirking at Glory. She face-taloned. Sunny laughed. "I knew it! I knew it, I knew it, I knew it, I KNEW IT!" She said, dancing in a circle around Glory and Deathbringer. Glory smacked her with a wing when she came around again. "Hey!" She said, but she was laughing so hard it didn't sound right. Glory looked at her other friends. Clay and Starflight were talking, and Riptide was staring at Tsunami with love in his eyes. Tsunami looked the same way, and Glory noticed she was sporting a pearly ring on a talon. She jumped right up. "Tsunami!" She said, taking Tsunami's talon and looking at the ring. Tsunami blushed. "Oh yeah, um, me and Riptide-" "Are engaged!" Sunny finished for her. Tsunami glared. "Yeah, we are." Glory squealed, hugging her friend. Tsunami smiled, glancing back at her new fiance. "I'm invited to the wedding right?" Glory demanded, and Tsunami laughed. "Of course!" Then she went back over to Riptide, leaning on him. He wrapped a wing around her, and Glory smiled sadly. Looking at Deathbringer, she realized that she loved him. That she wanted to spend the rest of her life with him. Walking over, she sat down next to him and twined her tail with his. He placed a protective wing over her. Glancing up at him, she saw the love in his eyes. For her. And she knew. "I love you Deathbringer." She whispered, and he smiled. "I love you too, Queen Glory."

OK I LOVE THIS CHAPTER SO MUCH!! GLORYBRINGER 4LIFE! Anyway, I'll update soon, have fun with it. Later!

FlappySeal

Keeping Secrets

[image]

Glory was sleeping peacefully that night, curled up beside Deathbringer in her hut. When the first rays of sunlight shone in, Glory was awake and gently peeling herself away from Deathbringer. Stretching her wings in the morning light, Glory felt happier than she has in a long time. Launching herself into the air, she heads over to the hut where her friends were staying for another day. Sunny was awake, sitting at the entrance. A wide smile appeared on her face when she spotted Glory. Sunny leaped into the air and joined Glory. For once, Glory was glad that only Sunny was awake. "How are you? You don't look too good." Sunny asked, looking at Glory with a worried look in her eyes. Glory landed on a platform concealed by trees. Sunny followed suit. "Ok, seriously, what's wrong?" Sunny asked, and Glory paled. "Sunny, I have a problem." She said, and Sunny frowned. Then she smiled. "What are you smiling about?" Glory demanded. Sunny was bouncing around. "I knew it!" "Knew what?" "You're expecting a dragonet aren't you?" Sunny said, coming to a stop in front of Glory, her tail wiggling. "I, no, ugh, yes. I am." Glory said, staring at Sunny in disbelief. "How did you know?" Sunny smiled. "I just do." Glory rolled her eyes. "So, whatcha gonna name it? How 'bout, Sunny Jr.? Or Sunburst!" Sunny suggested. Glory sighed. "That's not my problem Sunny!" Sunny looked confused. "Oh? What is it?" She asked. "I need you to keep it a secret, okay? Don't tell anyone. Not even Deathbringer." Glory instructed, and Sunny gasped. "Are they you and Deathbringer's dragonets? And you didn't tell him?" Glory blushed. "Well, no, but-" Sunny cut her off. "There is no but. You have to tell!" Sunny was shouting now. Glory shushed. "Okay, I will. Just not right now." Sunny humphed but didn't complain anymore. By then, everyone in the rainforest was awake, and Glory spotted a worried Deathbringer flying through the trees. "I gotta go." She told Sunny. "I'll see you for Suntime." Sunny gave her one last hug, then crouched and told the dragonet inside, "See you later, Sunny Jr." Glory rolled her eyes once again before flying over to Deathbringer. He relaxed when he saw her. "Hey!" He called. "Hey." Glory replied, landing. "You're not supposed to run off without me." He said, and Glory sighed. "It's my kingdom. I can go where I please." Deathbringer nudged her. "What were you talking to Sunny about?" Glory tensed. "Nothing. Just saying good morning." Deathbringer nodded. "C'mon, let's get something to eat." Glory said, taking off and flying towards the pile of fruit. Carefully selecting a mango and a pineapple, Glory went back to her hut to eat. Deathbringer came too, but Glory shooed him away. "Go somewhere else." She said, pointing to his hut. "But I'm your bodyguard/True Love! You can't kick me out!" He whined, and Glory shoved him. "Yes I can, because I'm the Queen." And with that, Glory was free to think without Deathbringer pestering her. She knew the egg would come any day now, but she didn't know how to keep Deathbringer away. Settling down to eat her mango, Glory decided that she would wait until the time came.

Two Weeks Later

Glory was settling down on her platform when it happened. Moaning, she stretched out on her side. Deathbringer rushed over, sniffing Glory up and down, trying to figure out the problem. Glory looked at him. "It's the dragonet." She said, panic in her voice. Deathbringer's eyes widened with realization and he flew off to get Mayfly. When Mayfly arrived, she told Deathbringer to leave. He protested, but when Glory shot him a look he left. After about an hour, Mayfly came to get Deathbringer from where he had been pacing. Flying back to Glory as fast as he could, he landed to find her curled around an iridescent egg, the top black fading into a rainbow of color. Glory looked up at Deathbringer, eyes shining with love for this egg, their egg, and for him. He padded over and laid down next to her. "She's ours." Glory whispered, and Deathbringer glanced at the egg. "How do you know it's a she?" He asked, and Glory swatted him with a wing. "I just know." She said. Deathbringer kissed Glory, curling around her and their new egg. "I love you Glory." He said. Glory curled tighter around her egg, deathbringer standing guard. Glory smiled. They were the perfect family.

Hi! So, I know, a sweet chapter but not the best. Anyway, I'll update soon. Have fun with it! Later!

FlappySeal

Hatching Day

[image]

Glory sat outside the hut, watching the egg with loving eyes. Glory and Deathbringer had moved to the waterfall hut, deciding that it was the perfect place to raise a dragonet. Deathbringer came up beside her. "Hey." He said, looking down at her. "Hey." She replied, not taking her eyes off the egg. He dropped something at her feet. A white rose. "Oh!" Glory breathed, smiling. "There aren't any of these in the garden!" Deathbringer smiled smugly. "I have my ways." Glory sighed, leaning into her mate. Tails entwined, sitting at the entrance to the waterfall hut, watching the dragonet that belonged to them, Glory was content to freeze that moment in time and live in it forever. Glory yawned, stretching her wings. "I'll get the egg." She said, padding over and placing it into one of the large beds. Glory curled herself around it, closing her eyes. Deathbringer was in the other large bed, watching his mate and egg, protecting them. Glory fell asleep with the ones she loved most right there with her.

A loud crack woke Glory in the middle of the night. Deathbringer was still sleeping soundly, so she gently aroused him with her tail. "I think it's happening!" She whispered excitedly. Deathbringer perked up immediately, padding over too sit beside Glory. Glancing at the egg, Glory spotted a sizable crack at the top. It only grew, and within twenty minutes the dragonet had tumbled out into the world. A girl with bright yellow scales that swirled with orange and pink to look like the sunrise, Glory loved her at first sight. Especially because she had scattered black scales on her legs, and silver star scales on the underside of her wings. She also had two teardrop scales, one by each eye. Glory gasped, realizing what that meant. Our dragonet is a mind reader! The tiny dragonet sat up, flicking her tail. When she spotted her parents, she let out a small squeal and raced over to them. Tripping on her feet and landing on her nose, Deathbringer was about to move to help her, but Glory held him back. He relaxed when the dragonet jumped up, completely unfazed, and came to her mother and father. Glory enveloped the baby in a warm hug, Deathbringer wrapping his wings around his family. "What should we name her?" He whispered, and Glory had the perfect name. "Sunburst." She replied, and Deathbringer smiled. Sunburst flipped onto her back, one talon in her mouth, tail wrapped around her back leg. Glory smiled at her daughter, flipping her over and nudging her with her nose. Sunburst decided to then pounce on Glory's snout, digging in with small claws and nipping with itty teeth. Glory laughed at her ferocious dragonet. Tossing her head up, the dragonet flew off and landed on her mothers back, promptly sliding down Glory's tail. Deathbringer sat and watched his new daughter with warm, caring eyes, admiring how confident the little baby already seemed. Sunburst stumbled over to her father, pouncing on one of his talons. He lifted her up, tossing her onto his head. Sunburst squealed with delight, then, with a yawn, curled up on her fathers head and fell asleep. Deathbringer laid down slowly, careful not to tip the baby dragonet. Tucking his wing over Glory, the happy family fell asleep together.

Glory opened her eyes to see a bright flash of yellow, orange, and pink in front of her, deep blue eyes staring at her. Smiling as she remembered Sunburst, the new dragonet, she curled her tail around her daughter and pulled her too her side. "Morning, Sunburst." She said, and Sunburst perked up her ears. "Mommy?" She said, her voice a tiny squeak. Glory felt her heart swell with pride. "Yes?" I'm hungwy." Sunburst said, and Glory laughed. "Oh really?" Sunburst nodded. Glory hugged her daughter tight before walking over to the fruit cabinet and picking out a fat blueberry. She rolled it to Sunburst, who pounced on it, kicking it up with her back legs. She held it with her front talons while she bit into it, finishing in two bites. Deathbringer lifted his head and smiled at the blue nosed dragonet. He went over and licked Sunburst's nose, clearing all remnants of her breakfast. Sunburst curled up in her father's side, a splotch of color on a black canvas. He grinned at his dragonet as she began to lick his side. "Whatcha doing Sunburst?" He asked, and she looked at him with her pretty blue eyes. "I'm helping you be all cwean." And with that, she continued to lick his side until he finally had to get up and walk away. He came and sat by Glory, tails twined. "I love her." Glory said, leaning on Deathbringer. He licked her head. "Me too. And I always will."

Hey guys! So this is my longest chapter yet, and I absolutely love Sunburst! What do you think of the name? And the colors? I think she is perfect for Glory and Deathbringer, but I'm always open for suggestions. Anywho, have fun with it, and I'll see you later

FlappySeal

Introductions

[image]

Glory twitched her tail nervously. It had been two months since Sunburst was hatched, and now she could fly and talk, and had even found her own blueberry. Now, they were introducing her to Glory's family. (a.k.a the DoD) Glory was sitting outside her old hut, waiting anxiously for them to arrive. When Glory spotted them, it was because of the bright Sandwing that was racing towards her on quick wings. Sunny landed, panting, then throwing her wings around Glory. "Did it happen?" She whispered in Glory's ear. Glory nodded, and Sunny squealed with delight. Everybody landed, and Glory realized that the only ones there were Sunny, Clay, Tsunami, and Starflight. Just the originals. After saying their hellos, Glory led them inside of the hut where Deathbringer was sitting with his back to them. Glory cleared her throat, and before Deathbringer could turn around Sunburst was bounding towards her mother. Deathbringer tried to catch her but failed, and Sunburst came right over to Glory. Glory laughed at her daughter, picking her up and letting her rest on Glory's head. Sunny raced forward to meet the new dragonet, bombarding the little dragon with questions. "Sunny!" Glory interrupted. Sunny blushed and backed towards the other dragons. Tsunami marched up yo Glory. "Who is this?" She demanded, and Glory grinned at her. "This is my daughter Sunburst." She said, and Tsunami softened. "Your daughter?" She asked, and Glory nodded. Deathbringer came to sit by Glory, twining their tails and letting Sunburst slide down his tail. Sunburst giggled, jumping into the air and flapping her wings so hard she looked like a hummingbird. Glory shook her head at Sunburst, waiting underneath her. Soon enough, Sunburst couldn't do it any longer, and she drifted down onto her mothers back where she promptly fell asleep. Sunny fell in love with Sunburst, as did everyone else. As the little dragonet snoozed, she kicked her legs weakly and growled, snapping at unknown objects. Glory sat fondly watching, wondering how she ended up with a perfect dragonet, a perfect mate, the life of a queen, and the support that she had access to that came from her friends. Glory lived a perfect life, and she intended to keep it that way.

In an hour or two Sunburst woke up, yawning and stretching her tiny wings. She bounced up and hopped around the hut three times before hopping over to Glory. "Mommy, I'm hungry." She said, pulling Glory by the talon over to the fruit cabinet. Sunburst wasn't tall enough to open it by herself yet. Glory pulled over the thin door and moved to let Sunburst pick her fruit. She selected a pear, biting into the juicy fruit and tearing off a large piece. Glory smiled at her daughter, moving her over to the mat so that she didn't get pear juice on the floor. When Sunburst was done, her talons were covered in sticky pear juice, which she licked off. Then she went outside and pranced towards the waterfall. Glory raced after her, stopping her. "No, Sunburst. You can't go there." Glory scolded her daughter, and Sunburst's tail drooped. "But I wanna see the fishy!" She whined, and Glory sighed. Sunburst had been sneaking down to the waterfall to see a fish that came around every afternoon. lory took her daughters talon in her own. "Alright, we can go see the fishy." She sighed, and Sunburst smiled nice and wide. When they reached the pool, Sunburst dipped in a tentative talon, sending ripples across the pool. In a moment, the large fish was there. The fish was green and blue, with splashes of orange and yellow and black. "Hello, Kal." Sunburst said happily, and Glory cocked her head. "Kal?" Sunburst nodded. "This is Kaleidoscope, but I call her Kal." Sunburst explained. Glory nodded. Sunburst waved a talon at Kal, and she swam away. "Back to the hut." Sunburst said, skipping across the soft terf. Glory followed her hyper daughter. When she came in, she saw that Sunburst had climbed into the water basin, splashing around and making a mess. "What are you doing?" She asked, and Sunburst looked at her mother. "I'm learning to swim." She said. "Why?" Glory asked. "So that I can swim with Kal!"

Hey guys! So, what do you think? I think it turned out pretty okay, and the next chapter might be from Sunbursts perspective. Have fun with it, see you later.

FlappySeal

Making Friends

[image]

Sunburst fidgeted with her tail, holding it in her front talons. Mom sat beside her, smiling at her daughter. "You'll do great." She assured, and Sunburst sighed. It was so easy for her to say it! She was a queen! Of course, Sunburst was the princess, but she wasn't very regal. Not like her mom anyway. Sunburst was an awfully strange dragon. With pink, black, orange, and yellow scales, plus star scales on her wings, she didn't exactly fit in with the rest of the tribe. Add that to the fact that she was a mind reader, and the Rainwing/Nightwing princess, Sunburst had a pretty messed up life. And now her parents were expecting her to make friends. Sunburst was three years old now, and she had plenty of personality. Mom went inside, leaving Sunburst all alone to think about what she was going to do.

After 10 minutes of thinking, Mom came out and gave her a shove, urging her on. Sunburst squirmed, breaking free and launching into the air. "Okay fine, I'm going!" She said, flying off towards the village. Flying overhead, the village was a maze that Sunburst liked to explore in disguise. She did this now, shifting the color of her scales to pink and orange, erasing the black and star scales. She couldn't do anything about her teardrop scales though. Landing on the central platform, Sunburst set off towards where the dragonets would be. She was looking around as she went, so she wasn't watching where she was going. Suddenly she bumped into someone, startling her enough that her scales shifted back to normal. She stumbled back, tripping on her talons and ending up sitting on the ground like an idiot. The dragon she bumped into was a dragonet of her age, maybe a little older. The newcomer was a nightwing, and she rushed over to help Sunburst. "Oh my gosh, are you okay? I am soo sorry! I didn't even see you coming!" The Nightwing said, words tumbling out faster than Sunburst had ever heard. "I'm Starling." The Nightwing said, extending a talon. Sunburst accepted it and let Starling pull her back onto her feet. "I'm Sunburst." She said, shaking herself off. Realizing her scales were normal again with their weird patterns and colors, Sunburst blushed. Starling was staring. "Your scales are amazing! And Sunburst is soo much prettier than Starling, I think. You're Queen Glory's daughter aren't you?" Starling asked, and Sunburst could hardly keep up. "Yeah, I am." She said, then asked, "You really think my scales are cool?" Starling nodded. "I love them! I've never seen anything like it!" She said, and Sunburst smiled. "So, wanna be friends? I mean, we kinda already are, I think, but what about you?" Starling asked, and Sunburst smiled. "I'd like to be friends!" She said, flicking her tail from side to side. Starling grinned. "Great! What do you wanna do? We can go to my house, but my brothers and sisters are there so it's chaos and I don't like chaos do you?" Sunburst shook her head, clearing it. "We can go to my house." She offered, and Starling smiled and put her elbow through Sunbursts. "Off we go!" Starling cried, and Sunburst laughed. They leaped into the air, heading towards Sunbursts hut. Wait until Mom meets my friend! Sunburst thought excitedly.

Glory loved Starling at first sight. Her excitable energy and quick way of speaking made Glory certain she knew who her parents were. She was the perfect friend for Sunburst.

Sunburst and Starling made it to the hut just before lunch. Mom welcomed Starling in,a warm glow in her eyes. She kissed her daughters head, then asked, "What do you girls want for lunch?" Sunburst asked for some blueberries, her personal favorites. Starling asked for a mango. "So, Starling, who are your parents?" Mom asked, biting into a pineapple. Starlight swallowed her bite of mango before answering, "Fatespeaker and Starflight." Sunburst looked up. "Really?" Starling nodded. "How many brothers and sisters do you have?" Sunburst asked, and Starling answered, "Two brothers, one of them is my twin, and a sister." Sunburst smiled, wondering what it was like to have a sister, or a brother. "Starling, would you like to stay until dinner?" Mom asked. "Yes please." Was Starlings reply.

Hi! How how are you? Anyway, I think Sunburst got lucky. Starling is pretty great! Have fun with it, and thank you for the 65 reads. Later!

FlappySeal

Surprise!

[image]

Hi! Sorry it took so long to update! I am about to explode, thank you SO much for the 206 reads, and #3 in wof. I cannot believe it. But I'm just going on so I'll get to the story.

Glory sat looking at the rising sun, tail wrapped around her talons. Breathing in the fresh morning air, the wind cool on her scales. She was waiting. It was going to happen any day now, and then they'd have to tell Sunburst. That is what Glory was dreading. But she wanted to enjoy her freedom while she had it, before it all drifted away. And when it did, it would be gone for a while.

Sunburst was walking with Starling, talking about Jade Mountain Academy. "I'm so excited to go!" Starling nodded, adjusting her glasses. (I know I didn't mention that Starling had glasses in the former chapter, but just pretend I did, 'kay?) Sunburst skipped along the path, heading towards Starling's house. Sunburst had only been once, but Starflight and Fatespeaker loved having her, and Sunburst knew that Starflight and her mother grew up together. Starling looked at her. "What are ya thinking about?" She asked, nudging Sunburst with a wing. Sunburst edged away. "Nothing." Starling grinned. "Uh-huh. So you're not thinking about how your mom is going to have another dragonet?" Sunburst's jaw dropped. "What?!" Starling blinked. "You didn't know?! I thought you did, I mean, Glory told my parents, so I figured she told you!" Sunburst glared at her friend. Starling looked down, obviously upset, and Sunburt's gaze softened. She sighed. "It's not your fault. I shouldn't be taking my anger out on you, and I'm sorry. But I have to go have a very lengthy conversation with my mother." Starling sniffled and nodded, pushing up her glasses to wipe her wet eyes. Why is she so fragile? Sunburst thought, then shook the thought out of her head. "See you later, Star." She called as she lifted into the sky. Starling waved, saying something that Sunburst couldn't hear. She figured it was another apology. But she didn't want to think about that right now. Her top priority was not making her friend feel better, it was making sure her mother knew that it was not okay to keep secrets.

Glory was licking the remnants of a mango from her talons when a very angry Sunburst marched into the hut. Glory stared at her daughter, who was no longer a swirl of pink, orange, yellow, and black, but pure, bright red. Except for a small patch on her neck that was a blue that meant sadness. Glory panicked, fighting to keep her scales neutral. She knows. How did she find out? Sunburst sat down with a flare of her wings before addressing Glory. "What?" Glory asked, nervous. Sunburst growled. "Don't play dumb, Mom. I know you know what I want to talk about." Glory hung her head. "Burst, I'm sorry. I was going to tell you-" Sunburst cut her off. "Sorry? Mom, how could you keep a secret like that from me? I'm your daughter! And it affects me too! You're not the only one that it'll be different for! Did you tell Dad? I wouldn't be surprised if you didn't." Glory tried to speak, but Sunburst was on a roll. "And also, you told Starflight and Fatespeaker? Before your own daughter?" Suddenly Glory let out a groan. Sunburst's scales shifted immediately, changing to white-cream. She's scared for me. Glory thought, and another stab of pain slammed through her. Sunburst's ruff flattened in fear. "It's the dragonet, isn't it?"She whispered, and Glory looked at her. "I'll go get Dad. And Mayfly." Sunburst said, preparing to take off. Glory pulled her back. "I love you, you know. And I always will." Sunburst gripped her mothers talon. "I know. And I love you too." Then Sunburst flew off to get Mayfly. When she arrived at the healers hut, Mayfly was already packing up supplies. "How did you know?" Sunburst panted, catching her breath. Mayfly smiled. "I could see you coming from a mile away. Go tell your father, and I'll tend to the Queen." Mayfly took off into the sky. Sunburst scanned the forest, but she couldn't see Dad anywhere. Flying to the old hut, Sunburst found him inside. He looked up. "Hey, Bug." He said. "What's up?" Sunburst tugged him into the air. "Mom's having her dragonet." Dad looked confused. "How did you find out?" Sunburst rolled her eyes. "Doesn't matter. I'm gonna be a big sister!"

Hey! So I personally think that this chapter turned out really well. Sunburst is getting a little sis/bro! I haven't decided if I should make the dragonet a girl or boy, comment what you think. I'll update soon! Also, I wanna come up with a name to call my readers, so feel free to give suggestions! Later!

Growing Up

[image]

Sunburst sat with Mom and Dad in the hut, watching the egg carefully. A small crack had spread across the top, and it was growing larger by the second. A tiny head poked out of the egg, a piece on it's head. Mom encouraged the dragonet, curling herself around the egg. Soon, the egg cracked and a bright green dragonet popped out. Mom instantly moved her attention to the dragonet, wrapping her tail around it's tiny waist. But a surprise waited in the egg. The green dragonet squirmed away and dropped to the ground, plodding over to the egg and peeking it's head inside. Another head peeked out, this one red. Mom gasped, stepping over to her twin dragonets. "One's a boy, one's a girl." She said, looking fondly at her new daughter and son. "Which is which?" Sunburst asked, coming over to say hello to her new siblings. "The green one is the girl, and the red one is the boy." The girl jumped up and tripped over to Sunburst, purring and gurgling with delight. The red boy seemed timid and calm. Sunburst looked more closely at her sister. She had little circle shaped black marks on her stomach. "Mom, can I pick out her name?" Sunburst asked, bringing her head down to her sister's level. Mom smiled. "Sure. What do you have in mind?" Sunburst thought for a moment. "Kiwi." She said, and the green dragonet sneezed, holding her tail. "I think she likes it." Mom laughed, walking over to her daughters. "Hello Kiwi." The red dragonet hid in Dad's legs, his tail tucked between his legs. "This one should be Firefly." Dad said, and Mom smiled. "I like that." Coming over to her now large family, Mom enveloped them all in a warm hug.

Glory stared fondly at Kiwi and Firefly, watching them wrestle. Sunburst had gone to Starling's hut, and Deathbringer was gathering fruit, so Glory was watching the babies. She loved them so much, but she hadn't expected twins. They were the exact opposites of each other. Kiwi was excited, with so much energy that never seemed to go away. And Firefly was gentle and calm, and afraid of new things. When Glory had introduced them to fruit, Kiwi had gone right in and taken a huge bite while Firefly poked and prodded, only giving it tiny licks until he was sure it was safe to eat. Glory was extremely happy to have these dragonets, but she was dealing with a lot. With two new baby dragonets, it's hard enough, but Glory had almost forgotten that she was still the queen of the Rainwings. So whenever she could, she would slip away for an hour or two for suntime and whatever she needed to do as queen. But Glory wouldn't trade her perfect family for the world. Kiwi jumped on Firefly and started chewing his ear, making Firefly Whine in pain. Glory sighed, getting to her feet. "Kiwi, your brothers ear is not lunch." Kiwi looked at her mother innocently, releasing Firefly's ear and sliding to the ground. Firefly shook his head, pawing his ear. Glory sat back down, relaxing again when Kiwi started chewing instead on her brother's tail. "Kiwi!" Glory exclaimed, racing over and pulling her off. "Who's Kiwi?" A familiar voice said behind her, and Glory whirled to see Sunny standing at the entrance to the hut. "Sunny!" Glory cried. She shot Kiwi one last look before going to say hello to her friend. "What are you doing here?" Glory asked. Sunny shrugged. "Just wanted to say hello. And I'm glad I came! Who are these little dragonets?" Glory smiled. "The green is Kiwi, and the red is her twin brother Firefly." Sunny's expression melted into her face reserved for exceptionally adorable things. "Awwwww." She said. Glory nudged Sunny with a wing. "What about you? Do you have any dragonets?" Sunny smiled slyly at Glory. "Only one. Kato." She said. Glory hugged her friend. "Meerkat the dad?" Sunny nodded. "It really has been a while. How's Sunburst?" Sunny asked. Glory replied, "Fine. I'd have her say hello, but she's with Starflight and Fatespeaker's daughter right now." Sunny beamed. "She's friends with Starflight's daughter? How amazing is that! Now we just have to wait for another batch of the dragonets of destiny, with our children." Glory laughed. "Good to see you Sunny." "You too Glory." We really have grown up since our days in the cave.

Hi! I really enjoyed this chapter, with Kiwi and Firefly! I couldn't decide on a boy or girl, so I chose both! I'll update soon. Later!

New Feelings

[image]

Ok, so this is gonna be kinda weird. This is from Sunburst's perspective, but there is a huge time skip. The twins are now two, and Sunburst and Starling are 6 and heading to JMA. Hope you like it! Also, Glory and Deathbringer aren't in this one, and the other weird part I'm gonna go back and fill in the 3-4 years I'm skipping, or I might just write a sequel.

Sunburst stretched her wings, preparing for the long flight ahead of her. Starling was beside her, pushing her glasses onto her nose and studying a map of the way to the academy. Sunburst rolled her eyes, "Starling, come on! We have to get going or we're gonna be late!" Starling looked at Sunburst. "Okay, okay, let's go." Sunburst grinned. "We're going now!" Sh called back into the hut. Glory hurried out, followed by Deathbringer, Firefly, and Kiwi. They enveloped the two girls in a big hug. "See you soon!" Firefly called as Sunburst and Starling took off into the sky. "No we won't, idiot!" Kiwi said to her brother, slapping him with the tip of her tail. Firefly glared. "Yeah we will, 'cause we'll visit." He said, and Kiwi gave him a toothy smile. She pounced, and the last thing Sunburst heard was an indignant, "Hey!" from Firefly before she was out of earshot.

When they arrived, the first thing Sunburst noticed were how many dragons there were. All the tribes blending together in a kaleidoscope of color and shape. Sunburst spotted a bright orange Skywing with scattered red scales stretching her wings. She pointed it out to Starling, who squinted. "Wow, those are some big wings." She said, breaking out into a huge smile and doing a flip in the air. Sunburst tilted her head. "What?" Starling beamed. "I can finally study the other tribes! This is going to be amazing." Sunburst grinned at her friend. "Yeah it is."

After being assigned dorms and winglets (Starling and Sunburst had a celebration when they discovered they were in the same winglet),

Sunburst went to her winglets cave to unpack her stuff. She saw a leafy hammock swinging in the corner, and bounded happily over. Starling had already settled herself on a mossy bed with a scroll from the library all about Skywings. There were five other dragons in the winglet, and they all shared a cave. Sunburst got excited about meeting another dragon from a different tribe, especially when the Skywing she had spotted earlier came in. She stretched her impressive wings, showing matching orange undersides. She walked over to a stone slab, leaping onto it and folding her wings neatly against her sides. "Hi." She said. "I'm Aero." Sunburst smiled at her clawmate. "I'm Sunburst, and that's my friend Starling." Starling gave a wave. Aero frowned at Starling. "Why do you need a scroll about Skywings when you have one right in front of you?" Starling's head popped up immediately. "Huh? Oh! Wow, you're wings are amazing." Aero smiled proudly. Suddenly, three dragons came into the room. A warm-looking Sandwing, a less-than-friendly Icewing, and a sleepy-looking Mudwing. Sunburst grinned broadly. "Hi." She said. The Sandwing bounded over. "Hi!" She said, flicking her tail. "I'm Scorpion." The Icewing came over, wrapping her tail neat around her claws. "I'm Flurry." She said, and Sunburst noticed black spots scattered on her snout, tail, and legs. Sunburst tilted her head, and Flurry broke into a wide smile. "You like 'em?" Sunburst laughed. Flurry seemed like fun. The Mudwing yawned, stretching his wings then letting them hang limp. "I'm Cypress." He said, then went over to his mud pool for a nap. Sunburst counted. "Aren't we missing a tribe?" Just then, a green Seawing with yellow aquatic stripes and bright blue eyes walked in. "Hi." He said shyly, looking at the group. "I'm Seafoam." Sunburst blinked. Seafoam. Her heart fluttered, like it had wings of it's own as she looked at the pale colored Seawing. He caught her eye and blushed, Sunburst doing the same. Starling looked from Seafoam to Sunburst, then back to Seafoam. She smiled slyly. "Nice to meet you, Seafoam." He grinned, scratching the back of his neck with a talon. He padded softly over to seaweed bed, settling down. Sunburst followed him with her eyes, trying not to be too obvious. Seafoam noticed anyway. "What?" He asked nervously. Sunburst blushed and flicked her tail. "Oh, um, I've never met a Seawing before." She stammered. Seafoam gave her a small smile, and Sunbursts heart did flips. What is happening to me? Why do I feel this way every time I look at Seafoam? Maybe I can just ignore it until I can control these new feelings.

Hey! So, I just wanted to add a little first crush for Sunburst. Anyway, I think I might do some Firefly and Kiwi in the next chapter, and also I know that this Glorybringer oneshot doesn't have a lot of Glorybringer in it, I just sped through the chapters. I'm planning on making a one shots book, and I am open to requests, so comment your favorite one shots and I'll do my best.

Sisterly Love

[image]

Firefly sat by the waterfall, tracing delicate patterns in the water with a gentle talon. He sighed contentedly. He loved moments of peace like this, when he could be alone and quiet without Kiwi annoying him to death. But his moments didn't last. Kiwi jumped out from behind a bush. "Ha!" She cried as she pounced on her brother. He sighed, going limp underneath her. Kiwi sat back, frowning. "Hey, it's no fun if you don't fight back." She complained. Firefly sighed. He missed Sunburst. She always played with Kiwi and kept his twin away. But Sunburst wasn't here. And she wouldn't be back for a while, so Firefly was just going to have to live with it. Kiwi prodded his head with her front talons. "Hello? Anybody home?" She said, putting her head upside down in front of Firefly's. Firefly just sat down so Kiwi slid off his back. "Hey!" She complained. Firefly shook himself off and went back inside. Mom was in the hut hanging flower ropes. Firefly took in the sweet scent of the different flowers she had brought. Mom landed on the ground with a flower tucked behind one ear. "Hi, Mom." Firefly says. Mom comes over and licks him on the head, tucking a blue flower beside his ear. Firefly jumped away, pawing at the flower. "Mom, I'm too old for flowers." Firefly whined, and Mom stared. "You are never too old for flowers." She said sternly, placing the flower on his head again. Firefly sighed. There was no arguing. Now he really missed Sunburst. She would've gotten him out of the flower mess. Kiwi runs inside and does a flying leap into the pile of flowers Mom had collected. "Kiwi!" Mom exclaims, shooing her youngest daughter away. Kiwi giggles. "Sorry Mom." When she notices the blue flower on her brother's head, she bursts out laughing, rolling around with tears streaming down her face. Firefly snorted smoke, yanking the flower off his head and stomping on it. Then he raced outside, hoping for more peace.

Firefly was lonely. He didn't have any friends, his sister was obnoxious, and the sister who wasn't was a million miles away. Firefly came up with an idea that would get him in huge trouble, but if it meant freedom, he would do it. He was going to fly to JMA!

Hi, so I know this was short but I wanted to end it on just the right note. (Nailed that) I'll update soon, this time it'll be from Sunbursts POV, so be ready. Later!

FlappySeal

Trouble

[image]

Sunburst was looking over her schedule. They had been handed out the day before, and classes would start tomorrow. Starling was on one side of her, Seafoam on the other. Sunburst still felt all fluttery when she was around him, but now that they were friends it toned down a little. Sunburst yawned. It was early morning, just before sunrise. It wasn't surprising the three friends hadn't been able to sleep. It was way too exciting to be at an inter-tribe school for an entire year! So, since their beds were close to each other, they talked quietly all night, only getting two or three hours of sleep. But that was fine with Sunburst. She knew a million things about Seafoam now. Turns out that Tsunami and Riptide are his mom and dad, so him and Starling both got to see their parents. And Aero and Cypress were triplets, but their sister was in a different winglet. And they're parents were Clay and Peril! So it was true. A second generation version of the DoD, with some hybrids. Scorpion was Sunny and Meerkat's daughter, and Flurry's parents weren't anyone important. Not one of the DoD or anything. So Seafoam, Sunburst, and Starling had become good friends overnight. "Come on, let's go outside. This cave is starting to feel a little stuffy." Sunburst suggested. Starling looked up from her scroll. "You go ahead. I'm gonna stay here. I can't turn away! It's all about Skywing flight patterns!" She said. Seafoam nodded. "I'll come." He said, and Sunburst felt her heart stop for a moment. We'll be alone? Oh, I'm in trouble now. She thought, but simply said, "Let's go!" Sunburst and Seafoam made their way quietly across the cave floor. As soon as they were out, they took off down the hall and leapt into the air, Sunburst making it up faster than Seafoam. He shrugged. "I'll come." He said. Sunburst felt her heart stop for a second. We'll be alone? ACK! She thought, but she just smiled and said. "Let's go then." The friends stepped quietly around the sleeping dragons, breaking into a run and leaping into the air as soon as they were out of the cave. Sunburst made it up faster than Seafoam, but he just shrugged. "I'm a Seawing, we swim more than fly." Sunburst nodded. "Wanna go to the top of the mountain?" Seafoam grinned. "Sure." So they flew out into the cold morning air up to the top of the mountain, where they sat. Sunburst took a deep breath, loving the way the air hit her scales, cool and refreshing. Spreading her wings, she let the wind catch, making them billow out in beautiful waves. She closed her eyes, drinking in this peaceful moment. She folded her wings, eyes opening to see Seafoam staring with a far-off look on his face. Sunburst felt the blush. "What?" She asked. Seafoam jerked. "What? Oh, nothing." He said, smiling sheepishly. Sunburst smiled. She looked out on the horizon, spotting what looked like a bright red dot flying towards them. She pointed it out to Seafoam. "What is that?" He asked. Sunburst shrugged. "Dunno. Let's wait until it gets close enough that we can see it." Seafoam nodded. When the dot came into view, Sunburst gasped, spreading her wings and preparing to fly. "What?" Seafoam said, grabbing her tail to stop her from taking off. She shook him away. "That's my little brother!" She said, then jumped into the sky and flew as fast as she could to Firefly. He cried out with happiness when he saw her, but he had flown too far for too long. He was too tired. His wings went limp, and he began to plummet. Sunburst cried out, diving after her brother. She caught him in her talons, pulling up and flapping hard to make it back to the mountain. But Firefly was too heavy, and instead of going up Sunburst began to go down. "Help!" She yelled, and managed to make out a blurry green spot leaping into the sky. "Help." She said weakly. The last thing Sunburst remembered was a green and yellow face telling her it was going to be ok before she blacked out.

Hi guys! So, I know, this one wasn't the best, but I still hope you like it! I gtg, update coming soon. Later!

Flappy

Worried Sick

[image]

Glory was sitting in the hut, jotting down notes for things to do. She had a lengthy list that took up almost an entire scroll, even with Glory's small neat handwriting. Dipping her claw into the inkpot, she discovered it was empty. "Firefly!" She called. She had seen the heartsick little dragonet since yesterday night, but she knew he was probably just pouting. When he didn't answer right away, Glory started to get worried. It wasn't like her willing, timid dragonet to not answer his mother. "Can you bring me a new inkpot?" She asked, and when he didn't say anything or appear, Glory started to panic. "Firefly!" She yelled frantically. Deathbringer padded into the hut, looking calm and relaxed. But when he saw Glory's flustered, scared expression, his mood changed. "What's wrong?" He asked. Glory looked at him with panic in her eyes. "Firefly is missing." Deathbringer jerked back, surprised. "What? Are you sure?" He asked, the panic starting to creep into his voice. Glory nodded. Deathbringer swallowed hard. "You search the village, I'll search the rainforest." He said. Glory nodded, spreading her wings. "Kiwi is out gathering fruit with her friend Extraordinary." She said. Then she took off into the sky towards the Nightwing Village. The residents of the village were obviously nervous to have the queen in their home. Especially since Glory was scared and impatient. She asked every dragon the same question. "Have you seen my son, Firefly?" And everyone said no. When Glory had searched the whole village twice, she finally gave up and went home. She collapsed on the ground, head in her talons, shaking with sobs. "Where are you Firefly?" She whispered, mostly to herself. Deathbringer came too, and when Glory perked up her head in question, he just shook his head sadly. Glory broke down in sobs again, Deathbringer wrapping his wings around her in comfort. Kiwi burst in, looking tired. Glory jumped up. "What?" She said when she saw her daughters excited expression. Kiwi bounced up and down. "Fatespeaker's just told me. Starflight found Firefly at JMA!" She said. Glory swept her daughter up in a strangling hug. Kiwi squirmed free. "Are we gonna go get him or not?" She asked. Glory nodded. "Let's go get your brother."

When Sunburst woke up, she was in the medicine cave, one wing wrapped in bright bandages. She looked over and saw a sad-looking red face. "Firefly!" She yelped, glaring at her brother. "What are you doing here? What happened?" Firefly looked excited to tell the story. "I wanted to come see you! So I flew to JMA, but then I blacked out, and when you tried to save me I was too heavy and you broke your wing on the mountainside and then Seafoam saved us!" He said. Sunburst face-taloned. "Firefly, what were you thinking?! Mom and Dad could've brought you to see me!" She said. Firefly's face fell. "Oh." He said. "I didn't think of that." Sunburst rolled her eyes, then wrapped her brother in a one-winged hug. "I'm just glad you're all right." Firefly smiled. "Me too."

Hi! SO, Firefly is kinda in trouble, and Sunburst is hurt, and Seafoam is HERO OF THE DAY (Which should totally be a wof award.) LAteR!

Flappy

Coming Home

[image]

Glory and Deathbringer had been flying nonstop to reach JMA. Kiwi had come too, but the tired dragonet had fallen asleep and was now riding on Deathbringer's back. Glory panted, but not with fatigue. She was terrified of what might have happened to her little dragonet. If Kiwi couldn't make it all the way, what were the chances that Firefly would be able too? Very low. The mountain came into view, and Glory beat her wings harder, dropping into a steep glide and landing atop the mountain with a flourish of her wings. Sunny was waiting on the top of the mountain, looking worried. Glory ran over to her, eyes panicked. "What happened? Is Firefly alright?" Sunny placed her talons on Glory's shoulders. "He's ok. I promise. He's in the medicine cave." Glory's scales turned a horrible white. "Medicine cave?" She shrieked, body racked with concern for her dragonet. She tried to run past Sunny to get to the mountain, but Sunny moved in front of her. "Listen," She said firmly. "Firefly is not there because he is hurt. He's there because someone else is." Glory's scales turned even paler. "Are you talking about..Oh no." She said, pushing past Sunny. "Sunny followed Glory, staying by her side while she told Glory the story of how Firefly flew here and was saved by his sister. "Firefly would be dead if it weren't for Sunburst." Sunny said, a tear slipping down her cheek at Glory's horrible expression. "I want to see my children." Glory said, and Sunny nodded, leading her into a cave packed with bandages and medicines. Several woven mats lay on the large room's floor, only one occupied. Around the room were three dragons. The healer, who was a Sandwing with a small necklace around her neck, a yellow and green Seawing who was laying down with a furious blush all over his face. He had an inkpot, dipping his claw in and writing something on the cave floor. Upon closer inspection, Glory realized it was a sketch of a dragon with spread wings and a happy expression. He had mashed flowers for color, putting just the right amount of shadow in places. Glory recognized the dragon immediately. Sunburst. The other dragon in the room was a small red dragonet. "Firefly!" Glory cried, racing over to her dragonet. Firefly jumped right up and bounded over to her, burrowing into her wings. The Seawing had jumped up, obviously startled. His inkpot had spilled all over his drawing of Sunburst, hiding her in shadow. Glory cradled her son, wrapping him up and never wanting to let go. But when Sunburst said, "Mom?" Glory released her son and went to see her daughter. Sunburst had one wing wrapped in bandages, and her scales were paler than usual. Glory felt a tear slide down her cheek. "Sunburst, what happened?" She asked, concerned. Sunburst smiled, wincing at the movement. "I tried to save Firefly, but two-year old dragonets are heavier than you think." She said. "I couldn't hold him, and I was off balance. Apparently I slammed into the mountainside and broke my wing, and also earned a fair amount of bruises. If it weren't for Seafoam," She indicated to the Seawing, who was smoothing out his drawing with a gentle talon, trying to get some of the ink away. "I wouldn't be here. And neither would Firefly." Sunburst finished. Glory felt herself start fully crying. Sunburst tried to get up to comfort her mother, but fell back down hard. She cursed, earning a stare from her mother through teary eyes. Deathbringer came in, setting Kiwi down and coming over to hug his son and daughter. Sunburst retold the story, and Glory's tears never seemed to stop. Seafoam had come over, the blush gone from his face. He sat down with his tail over his talons, wings folded neatly. "How ya feeling?" He asked gently. Sunburst smiled at him. "Better than I did when I first woke up." She said, and Seafoam began to blush again. "Good." He said. Glory raised an eyebrow at her daughter. Her effect on Seafoam made it obvious. The two were in love. But neither of them knew how to say it to each other. Sunburst spotted her mother looking and just shrugged in a way that said, 'So what?'. Sunny was in the entrance to the Medicine Cave. "Mind if we stay here tonight?" Glory asked, and Sunny nodded. "Of course you can stay! We have extra caves all over. In fact, I think that there's one by Sunbursts winglet cave. Sunburst beamed. "Am I going back there!" Sunny nodded. "We thought it would be unfair to keep you in here." Sunburst beamed brighter.

Hi! I kinda loved this chapter, it was very sentimental sweet. I still cannot believe that this has more than 400 reads!! Thx so so much! Flappy OUT

Different

[image]

Seafoam had been with Sunburst all the time since she broke her wing. Sunburst had enjoyed having him there, and not just because she was pretty sure she liked him. He was just nice to have around. He insisted on doing most things for her, li,e carrying her scrolls like he was now. They were on their way to class with Webs, which Sunburst was so not looking forward too. Sunburst stretched her wing as best she could while it was wrapped in bandages. Seafoam was holding her scrolls with one talon, staying by her side. Sunburst glanced at him. "I can carry my own scrolls, you know." He just smiled his adorable smile at her. Sunburst growled softly in frustration. She couldn't believe this dragon. How could he manage to be so handsome and so annoying at the same time. She jumped at him, taking a swipe at the scrolls. He jerked away, causing Sunburst to lose her balance and begin to tip towards the ground. Seafoam dropped his load of scrolls and leaped towards Sunburst, catching her with one talon on her back. Sunburst felt furious blush coming. Maybe because I have pink and orange he won't notice. She thought. Seafoam was blushing too, his normally light green scales now colored with bright red. He helped Sunburst to her feet, making sure she was okay before gathering up the scrolls again. "Sorry." He mumbled. Sunburst frowned at him. "For what? You just saved me from further injury, again." This brightened Seafoam a little, and they continued to the classroom, where Webs awaited.
~~~
~~~

cave with Seafoam beside her. He grinned. "Cast finally off." Sunburst smiled wide. "I am never wearing any cast on my wing again. That was like torture!" She said. Seafoam laughed. Sunburst loved his laugh so much, she wanted to hear it all the time. She wanted to be the reason he laughed all the time. She wanted to be with him all the time. But she didn't want to say anything. Not yet, at least. She wanted Seafoam to say it first, but it wasn't going to happen. And she didn't want to get her heart broken by the most wonderful Seawing in the world. She must have had a sad expression, because Seafoam frowned and lifted her chin. "You okay?" He asked quietly. Sunburst nodded, afraid to say anything. Because she knew if she did, she would start to cry. Seafoam seemed concerned. He led her back to the empty winglet cave. Sunburst curled up on her bed and felt a single tear slip down her cheek. Seafoam hesitated, looking nervous, then came over and wrapped Sunburst in his wings, enveloping her in a warm hug. Sunburst looked at him, and he smiled nervously. He took a deep breath, then whispered so quietly Sunburst strained to hear. "I love you." He said, and Sunburst felt her heart pitter patter faster and faster in her chest. He loved her. She looked at him. "I love you more." She whispered back. Seafoam beamed, touching his snout to hers. Sunburst wanted to kiss him, but she resisted the urge. Instead, she twined their tails together and curled close to him, snuggling into his scales. He curled himself around her, looking as happy as he could get. "Sunburst, will you be my girlfriend?" He asked. Sunburst gazed at him, touching their noses together. "Of course." She said, then laid her head down and went to sleep.

Hi guys! Ok, so this had to happen, and I might be going crazy but I already picked out their dragonet and it's name. I ❤□□💝💝💝💝□ SeafoamxSunburst. Seaburst or Sunfoam for their ship name. I personally like Sunfoam, but you tell me which one you like better. Later!

FLAPPY OUTˆ□ˆ

Falling Hard

[image]

Sunburst had never been happier. Sure, she'd only been alive for six years, but she was living a perfect life. She was at JMA, she had a million new friends, and she had the best boyfriend in the history of the world. Seafoam was with her all the time. Sunburst had never loved him more. Her only problem was that she was going to have to tell her mother on visiting day, so she had that. But her life was virtually perfect. Her only really big problem was Starling wouldn't talk to her anymore. She seemed mad about something, but Sunburst didn't know what. Maybe she's upset cause I spend so much time with Seafoam. She thought, but then shook it out of her head. Starling was a great friend, and would be nothing but happy for her. But that didn't explain why she wasn't happy for her. But Sunburst didn't have much time to dwell on it. Seafoam came up to her, twining their tails. "Hey." He said. "Hey." Sunburst replied half heartedly. Seafoam frowned at her. "What's up with you?" He asked, and Sunburst shook her head. "Nothing. I'm just..Thinking." Seafoam smiled. "Are you thinking about our fabulous future together?" Sunburst smowned at him. (smowned means smiled/ frowned) He laughed. "Whats one your mind?" He asked. Sunburst looked at him. "Starling won't talk to me. She didn't ever come by to see me when I broke my wing, she didn't ever offer to help carry my stuff, and she's been extra cold towards me since we started dating." Sunburst said, flustered. Seafoam frowned. "Hmm. Aren't you and Starling friends?" He asked, and Sunburst glared at him, giving him a shove. "Of course we are, dummy! Why else would I talk to you about this?" He thought for a moment. "Because I am your most wonderful boyfriend?" He asked, a stupid grin on his face. Sunburst grunted and walked away. "I'm not going to get a serious reaction from you, am I?" Seafoam shrugged. "I need some lunch anyway." Sunburst sighed, heading towards the prey center.

~~~
~~~

Starling had fallen in love. And then her love had been taken away. Sunburst was a no good, dirty rotten, wrinkly old apple that had taken Seafoam away from her. So she was no longer going to be friends with that horrible boyfriend-snatcher. Sure, Starling and Sunburst had been friends since they were two, and sure, Starling shouldn't let a boy come between them, but when someone as perfect as Seafoam is taken away by someone as imperfect as Sunburst, you can't help but feel mad about it. Starling passed her winglet cave, where, unfortunately, Sunburst was staying in. She overheard Sunburst and Seafoam talking. "Starling won't talk to me." Sunburst began, listing off a bunch of things that Starling hadn't been doing. It made Starling feel a little guilty, but not much. She heard Sunburst grunt, saying, "I'm not going to get a serious answer out of you, am I?" Then she grumbled something about lunch and walked off. Starling knew this was her chance. She went into the cave, pretending to sort scrolls. Then Seafoam asked her a question. "Why have you stopped being friends with Sunburst?" He asked. Starling turned. "Because, I don't need to be friends with strange hybrid dragons." She said, turning back to her shelf and continuing to fake arranging scrolls. Seafoam looked hurt. "Sunburst isn't weird. She is the most perfectly imperfect dragon I have ever met, and if you can't see how lucky you are to have her as a friend, then she doesn't deserve to waste time fretting over why you won't talk to her." Starling felt tears spring into her eyes. "There's another reason, isn't there?" Seafoam asked, coming to stand next to her. Starling nodded. "It's because of me, isn't it?" He asked, quiet. Starling nodded again, then whispered, "I'm sorry. I know you love her. I never should have been jealous. I guess, I don't know, I wanted to know what love felt like?" Starling sniffled. Seafoam wrapped her in a hug, a hug that could only bring the amount of comfort a friend could. "Your friendship with Sunburst is what love feels like." He said. "Don't let me come between that." Starling nodded, pulling away from the hug. "I'm going to go apologize to Sunburst." She said. Seafoam touched her talon. "Don't ever let me come between your perfect friendship with Sunburst. I know how special she is, and how special she makes your life. Don't let me spoil that." Starling nodded. She wouldn't let anyone come between her and Sunburst again.

Hey guys! I know, this was a chill chapter, but I needed to tell you why Starling was so mad at Sunburst! And also, Seafoam is THE BEST DRAGON EVA!!! SUNFOAM 4 LIFE!! Anywho, stay flappy.

SEALOUT!

Replacement

[image]

Sunburst was back to a life with no problems. She was going to an amazing school, she had an excellent boyfriend, and Starling was talking to her again. Her life had never been better. And the winglet cave was always empty during lunch, so it gave her some alone time with Seafoam. They hadn't kissed yet, but Sunburst knew it would happen soon. The only dragons that were there sometimes during lunch were Starling, of course, and Aero. She hadn't been feeling the best, and she thought it was best to stay in her winglet cave. The rest of them didn't mind. Sunburst walked between Seafoam and Starling, her tail twined with her boyfriends while she talked to Starling about the upcoming test. "...Webs said we had to have a study buddy, so.... I was wondering if you would be mine?" Sunburst asked Starling. Starling grinned. "Sure!" She glanced over at Seafoam, who just shrugged. "I might be buddies with, um, Flurry?" He said, and Sunburst laughed. "I got you a study buddy already, genius." She said. Seafoam tilted his head. "Who?" He asked. "A Skywing from another winglet. His name is Ember, I think." Seafoam nodded. "Oh, him. He's um...Skywingy?" Sunburst rolled her eyes. Starling nudged her friend. Sunburst looked at her. Starling raised her eyebrows (lets pretend dragons have eyebrows) at Sunburst, who rolled her eyes. Seafoam smiled. "So.....Are we going to find Ember?" He asked, and Sunburst nodded. "I think he's in the Gold Winglet, so..." They went walking in a line towards the Gold Winglet cave. Inside were three dragons; A pale, almost white Sandwing, a purple-blue Nightwing, and a bright red Skywing with pale undersides of his wings that faded into orange. His underbelly was a pale, rusty orange color, his scales looking like glowing coals. The Skywing was a mottled mix of black and red, and rusted orange, making him look like he was alight with fire. Starling's pupils shrank, her wings tensed up, and her mouth twisted into a nervous smile. Sunburst looked at this odd reaction. When the Skywing looked over, blush started to warm Starling's cheeks. Sunburst slapped her with her tail. Starling went back to normal, pushing her glasses up on her nose. "Ember!" Sunburst called, walking across the cave to the Skywing. He gave her a smile. "Hi." He said, flicking his tail. As Skywings go, Ember was more friendly than most. Seafoam said hello, and then it was Starling's turn to introduce herself. "I'm Starling." She said calmly, adjusting her glasses yet again. Sunburst realized what was going on. Her friend had a crush on this Skywing! Sunburst grinned. She nudged Starling and whispered, "Ooooooooooo." In a singsong voice. Starling blushed, then growled softly at her friend and shot her a look. Sunburst sighed, fighting a smile. Seafoam twined tails with her, making her blush. Ember laughed a little. "You wanna start studying?" He asked Seafoam. "Sure!" He replied, going over to sit next to Ember. The girls left. Heading back to the cave, Starling didn't say a word. But when they got to the empty cave, she started talking. "Did you see him? I think he looked at me! Did I look stupid? Oh, Sunburst. What's happening to me?" She groaned. Sunburst grinned. "Someone's in love with a very special Skywing." As Sunburst talked, an orange head dotted with red poked up out of a bundle of animal pelt. "Aero!" Starling yelped. Aero sneezed, her scales looking slightly green. "Hey guys." She said, sounding congested. "Mind giving me a hand to the medicine cave?" Sunburst hopped up onto Aero's ledge and helped her down. "Not feeling too great, huh?" She asked, and Aero coughed in reply, a burst of flame escaping. Sunburst jumped back. "Woah!" She said. Aero wobbled towards the cave door. "Try flying." Starling suggested, and Aero spread her large wings, springing into the air. She did seem more comfortable up there, making it to the medicine cave faster. Outcast checked her scales, looking despairing. "Sorry, Aero." She said. "You've come down with a serious condition. We'll keep you here for another day, but then we'll have an escort take you home. We just can't risk the sickness spreading." Aero looked downcast, but that might've just been her appearance. "Thank you, girls. Are you in her winglet?" Outcast asked. The girls nodded. So did Outcast. "Alright. Your the Jade Winglet, right?" She continued after receiving yes's from the girls. "Well, we need to clean your cave. So, for now, you can stay with the Gold Winglet. Their cave is big, yes?" The girls nodded again. "Alright. And we'll have to find a new Skywing for your winglet, but we can worry about that later." Outcast sent them away. Starling was walking stiffly, her legs straight as sticks. "You ok?" Sunburst asked, but she knew it was a stupid question. "We're staying with him!" Starling moaned.

Hi guys! I had to add someone to heal Starlings heart, so here he is! Ember, the brave/dashing/on-fire Skywing! Stay flappy.

SEAL OUT

Panicking

[image]

Sunburst tried to calm her friend. But Starling was panicked. It only got worse when Seafoam came back and said, "Hey did you guys know we're staying in the Gold cave for a little?" Sunburst glared at her boyfriend, making him smile nervously. "What did I do?" He asked. Sunburst sighed, walking over to him. "You didn't do anything. Starling is just.....A little upset about staying in the Gold cave." Seafoam snorted. "A little? She looks likes she's about to have a heart attack over there!" Sunburst frowned and smacked him. "You can be such an idiot sometimes, you know that?" He grinned at her. "Isn't that why you love me?" Sunburst smacked him again. He just shrugged. "Come on, Starling. Time to go." Sunburst said gently to her friend, helping her too her feet. Starling took a deep breath, standing up tall and pushing her glasses up on her nose. "I'm ready." She said, more to herself then to her friends. They walked side by side towards the Gold Winglet cave, Starling keeping her composure the whole time. When the cave was in sight, Starling began to shake. Sunburst grinned at her friend. "Wow. You've got it bad." Seafoam looked confused. "Bad for what?" Sunburst snorted. "For Ember, genius. She's got a crush on him!" Seafoam swallowed hard. "You do?" Said a voice. Looking up, Sunburst saw Ember outside the cave, a shocked look on his face. Starling turned red horns to tail, stammering a few unintelligible words before turning and racing down the hallway. Sunburst was about to race after her, but Ember beat her too it. He jumped into the sky, following Starling's path. Sunburst sat down, head in her talons. Seafoam sat beside her. "Hey, it's ok." He said, wrapping her in his wings. Sunburst began to cry. "Ugh, Seafoam! Stop trying to make me feel better. It's my fault that Ember knows now, and she'll probably never talk to me again." Sunburst said, tears streaming down her cheeks. Seafoam touched hi nose to hers. "It's ok." He murmured, eyes closed. Sunburst sniffed. Then she closed her eyes too. They leaned in, first touching noses, then touching lips. Sunburst's heart exploded. She kept her lips on his, wrapping her talons around his neck. His went around her waist, she could feel them on her upper and lower back. She pressed herself harder against him, tilting her head to the side. When they finally pulled away, Sunburst felt like a million butterfly's had been released into her stomach, fluttering around intensely. Seafoam was grinning like a maniac. Sunburst pecked his lips one last time, short and fast but still wonderful, before heading towards where Ember and Starling had gone. Sunburst heard them talking around a corner, so she stopped to listen. "…..And I think you are the most perfect dragon to ever roam the earth." Ember was saying. Sunburst could picture Starlings expression, blush in her cheeks and a smile on her face. "You do?" She whispered. Sunburst thought Ember must have nodded, because Sunburst heard the scrape of claws against dirt. She peeked her head around the corner to see Starling on top of Ember, pressing their lips together. She stifled a laugh. Who knew Starling could be so confident when it came to, well, true love? Seafoam was beside her, and he did laugh. Starling looked up, tearing her face away from Embers. He looked happy. Sunburst yanked her head back, Seafoam copying her. "You can come out now, Sunburst. I know you're there." Said Starling. Sunburst peeked her head around the corner. "How?" Starling rolled her eyes. "Well, you're not very stealthy. And your wingtips are bright pink, which is kinda hard to miss." Sunburst glanced at her wingtips. They were bright pink! She growled at Seafoam a little, then kissed him and went over to Starling. She raised an eyebrow at Sunburst. "Did I just see what I think I saw?" She said, grinning. Sunburst snorted. "I don't know. Did I really see you jump on top of Ember and kiss the heck out of him?" Starling blushed, and so did Ember. Sunburst just grinned. "Let's go. Now that your weird drama problems are over, we can go get comfortable. And, you know, maybe make it inside the cave?" Starling smiled. "Let's go."She twined her tail with Embers, walking close to him so that their wings touched. Sunburst laughed. How did this romantic stuff come so easy to her book-worm friend? Starling looked at her. "What?" She asked. Sunburst just shook her head. "Nothing."

Hi guys!!! So, I am almost to 600 reads! I never thought that would happen! Anyway, thank you. Stay flappy!

SealPupper

Scorpions Tale

[image]

Hey guys! So I got a request to give the gangs clawmate Scorpion (a.k.a, Sunny's daughter)a nightwing bf. So, I thought that I would do a side story to explain what happens, and then Scorpion will make more appearances in the story. Enjoy!

Scorpion walked down the hall, tail swinging back and forth. Her wings were tucked at her sides. Her scales were a sandy brown color, and she had one horn wrapped in a bandage. Not because it was hurt, but because it looked cool. She had bright teal-blue eyes, and she always wore a light brown bandana around her neck. And she was feeling a little lonely. I mean, sure, she had friends, but most of them had S/O's. Like Ember and Starling, or Seafoam and Sunburst. Even Cypress has a girl, and he was a stiff Mudwing. Scorpion felt a little, well, alone. Her winglet was a very friendly place, but mostly because her friends and their bf/gf was in the winglet too. Ember had replaced Aero, so Starling lucked out. But Scorpion wanted somebody to hold her at night. She was thinking about maybe going home, but Mom (Sunny) was here. So she kinda had to stay. She was on her way to the prey center when she spotted a group of dragons. Probably one of the other winglets. She thought, going over to say hello. It was a group of five dragons. A Sandwing, a Rainwing, an Icewing, and two Nightwings. Scorpion looked at the group with amazement. The original Jade Winglet, plus a dragon that she didn't know. Winter, Qibli, Kinkajou, Moon, and another Nightwing that she hadn't seen before. Scorpion blushed when Qibli looked over at her. "Hi!" He called, and Scorpion almost fainted. Qibli had said hi to her. I mean, these dragons were kind of famous. Moon glanced back. "Wanna come over?" She asked. Scorpion nodded, skipping towards them. "I'm Scorpion." She said. Qibli smiled. "Sunny's daughter?" Scorpion nodded. The original Jade Winglet was pretty old now, adults. She wouldn't be surprised if they had dragonets of their own. Qibli grinned. "I'm Qibli, this is Moon, the cold one is Winter, the pink one is Kinkajou, and the other is DreamEnder." He said. Scorpion waved. Dreamender waved back. He seemed to be a little older than she was. Moon went and sat by DreamEnder. Scorpion spotted a resemblance immediately. They had the same gentle expression, and he had teardrop scales by his eyes. His eyes had a sparkle of mischief in them, and his smile had a way of cheering people up. He had a sandy colored underbelly that matched the color of Qibli's scales. This must be Moon and Qiblis son. Scorpion thought. Moon nudged DreamEnder forward. He shot his mother a look that said 'I can do this on my own.' Then walked forward towards Scorpion. She smiled at him, nice and friendly. "Hi." Scorpion said in her happy voice. DreamEnder smiled nervously. "Hi." He said. "Your Qibli and Moon's son aren't you?" Scorpion asked. He blinked in surprise. "How did you know?" Scorpion grinned. "Well, the resemblance is pretty obvious. So I was right?" DreamEnder nodded, and Scorpion silently congratulated herself. Master detective over here. Make way! She yelled in her mind. DreamEnder looked at her strange. Oh, right, he's a mind reader. Hi DreamEnder. She thought. He grinned. "Soooooooooo....." Said Scorpion. "Are you attending JMA?" DreamEnder nodded. "Yep. And sorry I was in your mind. There are just a lot of hyper-active minds here."Scorpion shrugged. "I don't care. It's not like I have any thoughts I should be ashamed of, sooo...You can be in my mind whenever you want!" She said brightly, making DreamEnder grin again. Scorpion regarded him. Wow. He is HOT. She thought, then dispelled the thought quickly, blushing. DreamEnder raised an eyebrow. Scorpion pretended like nothing happened. "Hmmmmmm," She said. "You'll probably be in the Gold Winglet, since Ember just transferred." Too bad. It would be pretty great/wonderful/absolutely amazing to have him in my winglet. She thought, then pushed the images that had sprung up of her and DreamEnder together out of her head as fast as she could. She laughed nervously, blushing when she saw DreamEnders confused expression. "What?" She asked. He beamed. You like me, don't you? He asked in her mind. Scorpion took a deep breath. Yes. I do. DreamEnder beamed bright, his smile extra bright compared to his scales. Scorpion laughed. Do you like me? She thought. Yes. I really, really, really do. Came the reply. Scorpion almost shrieked with joy, but caught herself. Soooooo..... DreamEnder said in her mind. Scorpion grinned. Sooooo.....You're my boyfriend now, right? Dreamender grinned back at her. Yeah. I am.

Hi guys!! This one was a request, tell me what you think!! Stay flappy.

SealPupper

Visiting Day

[image]

Sunburst sat next to Seafoam, fidgeting nervously with her tail. She was tense and stiff and nervous. Seafoam must have felt it, because he put a wing around her. Sunburst relaxed instantly. Her boyfriend had that effect on her. She leaned into him. "Nervous about your mom, huh?" He asked, but it was more of a rhetorical question. Sunburst nodded anyway. "I'm just a little nervous about how she'll react. I mean, she'll probably be happy, but I dunno." Seafoam hugged her tight. "You'll be alright." He said. "Meanwhile, I haven't told my dad, and Mom hasn't told him either." Sunburst thought for a sec. "Tsunami? And Riptide." Seafoam nodded. Sunburst nudged him. "You'll be alright." She teased. Seafoam grinned at her. Sunburst kissed him, twining their tails. "I gotta go." Seafoam said when Tsunami started calling him. "I think my dads here." Sunburst pecked his cheek. "Bye." She said. He smiled at her. Then he ran off towards where his mother's voice. Sunburst was still feeling warm and fuzzy from being with Seafoam when she was tackled by a bundle of red and green. She laughed as she fell, landing on her back with two tiny dragonets on her stomach. "Hi Sunburst!!" Cried Kiwi, jumping up and down on her sister. Firefly was just sitting. Sunburst mock growled at them, then sat up so the went tumbling off. "You two are getting big!" She said, wrapping her brother and sister in a hug. Glory and Deathbringer came in more slowly, walking together. "Hi Mom." Sunburst said, going to hug Glory. "Hi Dad." Glory hugged her tight. "We've missed you!" Said Glory, planting a kiss on her daughter's forehead. "I've missed you too." Sunburst replied. She went over to hug Deathbringer. He smiled at his daughter warmly. "Hey, Bug." He said. Kiwi bounced over. "Who was that dragon you were kissing?" She asked. Sunburst felt her face grow warm. She was certain she was red horns to tail. "I, well, um, I-" Glory just laughed. Sunburst relaxed, twining tails with her mother and father. Seafoam came trotting over a minute later, tailed by a little Seawing dragonet. Sunburst smiled at her boyfriend, though she was sure she looked nervous. "Who's this?" She asked. Seafoam smiled. "This is my little sis, Kelp." He said.

Sunburst smiled at Kelp. Kelp smiled back, then growled a little and pounced on Kiwi. Kiwi yelped. She wasn't used to being down. So she took it as a challenge and started a little dragonet sparring match with Kelp. Glory nodded at Seafoam. "Who's this?" She asked. Sunburst choked on her words for a second. "This is Seafoam. He's in my winglet." Glory nodded. Seafoam gave her an encouraging smile. Kiwi grinned. "He's your boyfriend, right?" Once again, Sunburst was red all over. Even Seafoam blushed. Glory smiled. "I like him. You chose a good one." She whispered to her daughter. Sunburst shook her head. Going to sit by Seafoam, she leaned into him a little. He nudged her. "Wanna come meet my dad?" Sunburst almost said no, not wanting an awkward situation again. But she went anyway. She twined their tails along the way. Riptide was waiting for them. Tsunami and Kelp were talking to Glory and Deathbringer and Firefly and Kiwi. Sunburst pulled her tail from Seafoams. Riptide looked amused. "I saw that, you know." He said. Seafoam grinned. "I'd like you to meet my girlfriend, Sunburst." He said. Riptide gave her a warm smile. "Nice to meet you, Sunburst." Sunburst smiled. "You too."Seafoam tapped her with a wing. "See? That wasn't so bad." He said. Sunburst just rolled her eyes. Then she planted a quick kiss on his lips before running off towards her parents. Glory looked even more amused than Riptide had. "I saw that." She said. Sunburst rolled her eyes again. Glory looked pleased. "Looks like you inherited some of my attitude." She said. Sunburst grinned. "Yeah?" Glory hugged her. Deathbringer came over. "Time to go." He said. "You've got classes." Sunburst hugged her parents and siblings one last time before they left. "See you at the end of the year!" She called. Then she went back to the winglet cave and got out a scroll and inkpot. Seafoam came in. "Whatcha doing?" Sunburst went over to him, twining their tails. "Well, I was trying to draw like you do. But mine looks more like a trampled elephant." Seafoam laughed, tilting his head to the side to look at her drawing. He snorted. Sunburst glared. Seafoam laughed again. Then he guided Sunbursts claw across the page. Sunburst just leaned into him, enjoying his ocean smell. "I love you, you know that?" She said. He smiled. Then he kissed her. "I love you more."

Hi guys! So, I know, kind of an awkward chapter. But no worries. It gets better. Stay flappy!

SEALOUT

Feeling Fine

[image]

Hi guys! So real quick Imma put down a list of all the ships in this book(Some of them are my characters)-
Sunburst x Seafoam
Ember x Starling
Scorpion x DreamEnder
Firefly x Phoenix (It'll make sense later)
Glory x Deathbringer
Riptide x Tsunami
Sunny x Meerkat
Fatespeaker x Starflight
Clay x Peril
Moon x Qibli
That's all!! I'll get to the story now.

Sunburst flapped her wings steadily against the wind, feeling the cold air brushing against her scales. Or maybe that was just the lonely feeling that had overtaken her. She had just left JMA until next year, and for the first time in forever she was going to be miles away from Seafoam. He promised to visit, and Sunburst was going to visit him every weekend, but she was still afraid of two things. The first being she didn't like to be lonely. And the second being that Seafoam would fall in love with some dragon in the Sea Kingdom. At least she still had Starling, who was also having a little trouble being seperated from Ember. But she seemed better than Sunburst. Sunburst was excited to come home to the perfect rainforest, where her sloth, and her family, and her favorite suntime spots were. She only wished she could share those perfect feelings with Seafoam. The rainforest came into sight, green trees and colorful flowers. Scorpion probably had it best. He boyfriend lived in the Nightwing Village, and she lived in the Sand Kingdom, meaning she could basically visit whenever. Meanwhile, Seafoam was in the ocean where Sunburst couldn't be. She almost burst into tears, right then and there. Almost. When Sunburst entered the rainforest, she didn't go straight home. She decided to go to her favorite spot in the whole rainforest, where she knew no one would find her. Because no one else new about it. It was a serene spot in the thickest part of the rainforest. It was hard to get through, but Sunburst knew a way. Her spot had a wooden suntime platform built between two trees, which she had hung a hammock from. A small waterfall trickled into a pool big enough to take a swim. Sunburst used it for water, but she figured that when she showed Seafoam this spot he'd want to swim and splash. Flowers grew in patches on the trees and the mossy ground, which Sunburst had spread woven mats over. Fruit hung in delicious bunches all over, juicy and sweet. It was the perfect place to think. A furry lump dropped from one of the trees. "Hi, Liana." She said to her gray-blue sloth. Liana purred. Sunburst nuzzled her, then slung her onto her head. Liana gurgled. Sunburst smiled at the sweet creature. "I've missed you, Li." She said, scratching Liana with a talon. "But you didn't miss me?" Said a very familiar voice behind her. She turned to find Seafoam looking at her. "Seafoam?" She asked. "How did you get here?" He grinned. "I followed your very lovely bromeliad scent." Sunburst blushed, then tackled Seafoam and placed her lips on his. He wrapped her in his wings and arms. Sunburst pulled back. "What are you doing here?" She asked, so very happy. He smiled. "I had to see you. Is there anything wrong with that?" Sunburst didn't say a word, just kissed him again. After Sunburst enjoyed a piece of fruit with Seafoam by her side, he swallowed. "I gotta go." He said. Sunburst frowned. "Why?" She asked, confused. "Because I'm not technically supposed to be here, and I think my mom'll start to get worried." Sunburst sighed. "Alright." She said. "But your coming back next week." Seafoam nodded. Sunburst kissed him one last time. "Love you." She said. He smiled brightly. "Love you more." He replied before springing into the air and flying away. Sunburst was in a much better mood when she left her spot, and her mother noticed right away. "I thought you'd be more upset about having to leave the academy and Seafoam." Sunburst shrugged. "I'll see them both again soon. So why be upset about it?" Glory looked proud of her daughter. "You are absolutely right. Now come eat something." Sunburst shook her head. "I already did." Glory smiled. "Then come say hello to your soon-to-be sibling." Sunburst took a moment to process these words. Then she broke out in a huge smile. "Let's go." She said. Inside was a new egg, this one full of blues and greens. Kiwi and Firefly were prodding and poking at it, making Glory growl at them a little. "No messing with the egg." She said. The twins stopped poking. Then they spotted their sister and started poking her instead.

Hi guys! I know, kind of a short chapter. But I'm going to do the new dragonet, and then a time skip. So be prepared. Stay flappy!

SEALPUPPEROUT

Hearts Full Of Love

[image]

Sunburst sat with her mother and father, enjoying the rising moons. Kiwi and Firefly were already asleep. But the moons weren't the only reason they were out. The egg had started hatching five minutes ago, and the family was anxiously awaiting the new arrival. Suddenly a sneeze sounded from inside the egg. A little dragonet popped it's head out, examining the world. Glory laughed and picked up the sneezy little baby. "Welcome to the world, Passion." She said. Sunburst tilted her head. "Passion?" Glory nodded. "Passionfruit. So Passion." The name was fitting. Passion had a thinking face, obviously wondering about the new world around him. Deathbringer went to say hello to his new son, but Sunburst hung back. She went over to the waterfall, trailing her talon in it's cool surface. It reminded her of Seafoam. A rainbow fish swam over, splashing. Sunburst smiled. "Hello, Kal. Long time no see." She said to the fish. Her childhood friend Kaleidoscope. The fish. Sunburst went to go meet her new brother. Passion was already walking, examining everything. He sneezed again. Sunburst laughed. "Your quite the sneezy one, aren't you?" She said. Passion sneezed. Sunburst felt love swelling up in her, for all the dragons she loved. For her mother, Glory, and her father, Deathbringer, and Kiwi and Firefly and Passion and Starling and all the dragons she had come to know. But most of the love was for Seafoam. Sunburst loved him more than anyone. And she hoped he felt the same.

Hi!! So I know this chapter is really short, but I really want to get to the time skip!!!! Stay flappy!

Proposal

[image]

Hi guys! So this is the time skip. Um, Sunburst is now 10. The twins are 6 and at JMA. And Passion is 4. BTW, Sunburst and Seafoam actually live at JMA in place of Tsunami and Starflight. Seafoam is the art teacher, plus a chaperone (They have art once a week combined) and Sunburst is the librarian. :) Enjoy!! (Also can we pretend it's Sunburst in that pic instead of Glory? Thx!)

Sunburst sighed. She was ten years old, and she wanted to do something fun, not run a school library. Seafoam just got to wander around the school, kind of like what they had done when they attended. He got lucky. And Sunburst barely got to see him anymore. He was very busy with all the fights that had been springing up between Winter's daughter Avalanche and Starlings daughter Phoenix. Sunburst was so happy that Starling had a daughter. She wasn't technically old enough to go to JMA, but Starling was one of the teachers, and Ember helped too. So that meant that two-year old Phoenix got to come to JMA early. Phoenix was more Skywing than Nightwing, with giant wings and curled horns. He bright red and orange scales reminded everyone of the phoenix, the firebird. So Phoenix. She was feisty, with a confident attitude with a touch of snark. Avalanche, on the other hand, was just as cold as her father. Winter found a mate in a gentle Icewing named Iceberg, who was much nicer towards others. Avalanche was pure white, and her scales glittered. Even her spikes and horns were a pearly white color, almost seeming to glow. They should've named her Diamond. Avalanche was also six, so she was much larger than small Phoenix. But Avalanche seemed a little bit scared of this ferocious dragonet. Still, Seafoam was always out making sure that nobody died on the days that he didn't teach art class. And Sunburst was stuck in the library. A little blue dragonet with shining eyes came up to her with a scroll. Sunburst took it, then opened a drawer with all the stamps. "What's your name?" She asked gently. The blue dragonet replied, "Dream." He was a Rainwing, so of course he had a name like that. Well, Sunburst was a Rainwing too, but her name wasn't crazy. Sunburst sifted through until she found his stamp. Stamping her sheet, she handed the scroll back down to him. He smiled at her. She smiled back. He left. A new dragon came. He smiled at her. Sunburst smiled back, then realized who it was. "Seafoam!" She yelped. Jumping to him, she kissed him once. Then she smacked him hard with a wing. "Why haven't you come to see me earlier?" He winced. "I've been.....Busy." He said. Sunburst snorted. "Busy? That's all you have to-" Seafoam cut her off. "You wanna do something fun?" He asked. Sunburst relaxed, nodding. "Yes, please." Seafoam led her outside and into the air. Sunburst went after him. He took her to a beautiful spot on the beach, lined with palm trees and gorgeous seashells. Seafoam looked nervous. Sunburst went over to him. "What?" She asked. He took a deep breath. "I love you more than anything, Sunburst." He said. "And I always will. And I want to be with you for the rest of my life, Sunburst. I really, really do." Sunburst sucked in a breath. Was he- Was this a- She didn't know. "Sunburst." He said. "You are my one and only. So, I have to ask. Will you marry me?" Sunburst smiled bright and big, feeling happy tears springing to her eyes. "I love you too." She said. "And yes. Yes, yes, yes, yes!" Seafoam kissed her, long and sweet. As he did so, Sunburst felt something slip onto one of her talons. Looking at it, she saw a perfect ring, swirled with colors of the rainforest and colors of the sea. "I love it." She whispered, tears flowing freely now. Seafoam pulled her in close. "And I love you." He whispered. Sunburst sighed with happiness. Then she pulled back. "You know I have to become queen of the Rainwings, right?" Seafoam nodded. "Do you want to be queen?" He asked. Sunburst sighed. "No. I don't. I don't want to have to worry about that kind of stuff when we have dragonets, and-" Seafoam cut her off with a kiss. "Then don't be the queen." He said. "You have sisters. They can do it." "But-" Sunburst started. Seafoam kissed her again. "You'll always be my queen." He said. Sunburst cried again. Seafoam wrapped her up and kissed her again. And Sunburst knew that she would never be the queen. At least, not when she had Seafoam. And she was going to tell her mother. And she was going to make her perfect happily ever after.

HI guys!! YAY!! SUNFOAM 4 EVA!!!!!!!! Also, I know this is my story, but I just can't tear my eyes (Or hands) away from the screen! I update almost twice everyday, so expect a long finished product. Stay flappy!

XO SEALPUPPER

Happier

[image]

Sunburst sat curled happily against her fiance. Seafoam had a wing over her, his head down. He was still sleeping. Sunburst had only just woken up, but she was already itching to stretch her wings. Sliding gently away from Seafoam, she spread her wings with a flourish and flew into the air. She had gotten her very own hut that she shared with her very special dragon. It was in a perfect spot too. He spot. She'd had Seafoam help her, and her mother and father. And Kiwi and Firefly. Passion didn't want to. But a hut had been built in between the two trees, replacing the hammock. Sunburst loved her home, and her fiance, and her family. Her life was perfect. Taking off into the air and flying towards the waterfall, she went to go say hello to her family. Glory was sitting out in the sun, Passion over by the water. The four year old dragonet had become good friends with the rainbow fish Sunburst had named Kal when she was a kid. Firefly and Kiwi were at JMA, and Sunburst wanted to be there with them. And she was going to go back to JMA, to become the new medicine dragon. Seafoam was going to be the art teacher again. Glory smiled as her oldest daughter came down. "How are you today?" She asked, hugging her daughter. Sunburst yawned. "Tired. How are you?" Glory frowned. "Well, if you were tired, you should have staying in bed." Sunburst laughed. "I'm not that tired." She said. Passion bounced over. He had more energy, but with a new pair of round glasses, he looked more like the smarty he was. "Hi Suni." He said, calling her by the nickname he had given her. Sunburst smiled at her youngest brother, hugging him. "I'm here almost all day. You really miss me that much?" Joked Sunburst. Passion shrugged. "It's lonely here without you." Sunburst smiled at her sweet family. Deathbringer came out of the hut, yawning. He smiled sleepily at his daughter. "Morning Bug." He said, smacking his lips. Sunburst went over and wound herself around her father. He kissed her cheek. Sunburst turned around to see a light green dragon flying across the sky. Seafoam landed, kissing his fiance once before twining their tails and sitting down. Sunburst sat beside him. Glory smiled, Passion pretended to barf.

Sunburst mock growled, smiling playfully at her little brother. She leaned forward in a hunting position, waggling her tail. Then she pounced. Passion let out a yelp as his sister landed on top of him in a heap. She put one talon on his chest, her wings spread up in the sky. "Act dead." She whispered to her brother. Passion rolled his eyes. Then he flopped to the side, wings limp, tongue out of his mouth. "I win!" Sunburst shouted triumphantly. She jumped off her brother, who got up and adjusted his glasses, just like Starling used to. Sunburst tapped his head once, then sprung into the sky when Passion tried the same thing. She stuck out her tongue at him. He stuck out his. Glory laughed. Seafoam did too. Sunburst strutted queen-like past her brother and went to sit next to Seafoam. He kissed her cheek. Sunburst gave him a look, and he just shrugged. Then they said goodbye to Sunbursts family and went back home to the hut. Sunburst stretched out on her side on the platform, enjoying the warm sun beating down on her scales. Seafoam went to pay a visit to the ocean. He missed swimming, and Sunburst hated taking him away from that. But he seemed content just to visit. Feeling drowsy, Sunburst closed her eyes. The scent of Bromeliads filled the air. Her scent. She loved bromeliads, so she had planted several bunches around the hut. Their sweet scent drifted in the wind. Sunburst yawned, closing her eyes and falling asleep.

~~~
~~~

asked Starling. "I need to tell you something."

Dun dUN DUNNNNNNNN! I hope you are enjoying this story!! Yay! Sunfoam = □🤍❤□🤍💗

Stay flappy!

SEALPUPPER

Confiding

[image]

HI guys! The pic is totally random, just thought that it would be fun. Enjoy the story!

Sunburst flew with Starling across a crystal clear sky. Sunburst didn't exactly want to tell her friend her secret while they were flying, out of fear she might fall out of the sky. So she landed in the Sand Kingdom. As soon as her feet touched the ground, she jumped right back into the air. "Hot!" She yelped. Starling looked cautiously at the ground, eyes narrowed. Sunburst growled. "We could really use an Icewing right about now." She landed again, hopping up and down on the hot sand. Starling chose to stay in the air. "So...." Sunburst started. "I need to tell you something. That's kind of important." Starling stopped her. "I know about your dragonet, if that's what you were going to tell me. Congrats!" She said. Sunbursts mouth hung open. "How did you- I thought I-" Starling laughed. "I'm your best friend. I can tell." Sunburst smirked. "Soooooooo," Starling drummed the ground with her talons. "Have you told Seafoam?" Sunburst almost laughed. "Heck no." She said, earning a frown from Starling. "......But I'm going to tell him today. When we get home. So there." Starling smiled at her friend. "I know something else is bugging you." She said, and Sunburst sighed. "Okay, to be honest? I'm a little, no, really scared." Starling hugged the dragon that was basically a sister to her. "Don't worry." She said. "When you have that little dragonet, you'll wonder why you ever worried at all. Every bit is worth it." Sunburst looked at her. "Really?" Starling nodded. Sunburst did too. "Okay." She said. Then she hugged Starling tightly. "Thank you. I don't know where I would be without you." Starling hugged her back. Then they sprang into the air to go tell Seafoam the news.

~~~~~~

"Really?" He said when Sunburst finished. She nodded. Seafoam beamed, kissing Sunburst. She laughed, curled in close to him. Starling watched from the other side, quietly smiling. She remembered Ember's reaction when she had told him about
~~~~~~

Phoenix. He'd smiled big and wide, kissing her once, then again. Starling wished only the best for her friends. She said goodbye, then flew off towards home. Sunburst sighed contently, her scales pressed against Seafoams. He kissed her head, putting a wing over her and wrapping his tail around hers. Sunburst yawned. Seafoam looked at her, a little worried. "You alright?" He asked. Sunburst smiled. "I'm fine. Just a little tired." Seafoam nodded, then curled closer around her. Sunburst leaned into him, closing her eyes and almost instantly falling asleep. When she woke up, Seafoam was still beside her, looking tired. She laughed, a little sleepily. "Have you been awake this whole time?" She asked, and Seafoam nodded. Then he yawned. Sunburst stood up. "You get some rest while I eat something." She said. Seafoam began to protest, but Sunburst stopped him. "You need it, okay? I'll be alright. Plus, I have a very secret location for a home that also has all the food I need, so.....You can sleep for a while." Seafoam smiled, kissing her then falling asleep, soft snores filling the air. Sunburst flew up to the trees to look for a piece of fruit to hold her over. Liana dropped onto her back, purring slightly. Sunburst rolled her eyes at the blue-gray sloth. Then she spotted a perfect passionfruit and went to go get it. She sat down with the fruit, biting into it and enjoying every bit. When Seafoam woke up, she showed him where she had gotten it. Another had grown into it's place. Sunburst frowned. "That's odd. That is exactly where mine came from. And they don't grow that fast." She gasped. "What if it's magic? What if this spot is magic!" Seafoam looked nervous. "I don't think so." He said. Sunburst looked at him. "Why not?" She asked. Seafoam swallowed hard. "Um, because.....It's unlikely?" He said. Sunburst frowned. And when a realization came to her, she frowned deeper. "You did this, didn't you?" She asked, her voice low and dangerous. Seafoam swept his tail back and forth, a trickle of sweat on his forehead. "You're an animus, aren't you?" Sunburst said, almost disbelievingly. Seafoam looked down. "You are." Sunburst said, disbelieving. "You are and you didn't tell me!" She was yelling now. Seafoam looked at her with a sad expression. "I'm sorry." He whispered. Sunburst growled. "Sorry?" Tears sprang to her eyes. Seafoam reached out, but Sunburst jerked away. "I can't believe this." She said. "Sunburst-" Seafoam started. Sunburst cut him off. "No. No excuses." Tears slipped down Seafoams cheeks. "I'm leaving." Sunburst said, taking off into the air. She cried, not knowing why he would do this to her.

Seafoam didn't follow, but he saw something glinting at the edge of the platform. A ring swirled with blue and green and yellow and orange. Sunbursts ring.

Hi guys! Ok, so I'm being kind of evil. 😈 (Even to myself). But I had to have some drama between the seemingly perfect couple! Also, I kinda wanted to put an animus in the story, so yeah. There is our animus. Stay flappy! Or don't, because I know this chapter stings my Sunfoam shippers. Don't worry!

SEALPUPPEROUT

HeartBreak

[image]

HI guys! SO, there will be no healed hearts in this one. But there is a two month time skip to hatching day for the new dragonet. Enjoy!

Sunburst sat trailing her talon in the water. She'd moved back to her family's hut after finding out that her fiance was an animus and hadn't told her. It'd been two months, and now she was anxiously awaiting the hatching of her dragonet. Glory, Deathbringer, and Passion had moved away from the waterfall hut to give Sunburst her own home. She'd thanked them for it. She didn't feel like being around other dragons at the moment. She hadn't gone back to her home that she'd shared with Seafoam for two months, and she didn't care if he was still there or if he'd gone back to the Sea Kingdom. She just hoped he realized the full weight of what he'd done. Sunbursts egg was the same color as Seafoams scales, which was a horrible reminder of what she'd been through. But she knew she would love this dragonet all the same. A loud crack sounded behind her, and she whirled to see a little head poking out of the egg. Sunburst rushed over to the baby dragonet. She was a blue and green Seawing with giant wings. Her underbelly was the same color as her father's scales. Sunburst couldn't take any more reminders of Seafoam. She burst into tears, holding herself. The dragonet curled up in her legs, nuzzling her mother. Sunburst cried harder. "I'm sorry." She whispered to the dragonet. "I'm so, so sorry. HeartBreak." The new dragonet, HeartBreak, stretched out her wings. Sunburst cried harder when she saw a matching pattern on the undersides of her wings. The same pattern Seafoam had. Curled around her dragonet, Sunburst cried and cried and cried. She couldn't stop it. It was all too much for her already shattered heart to take. But she did love HeartBreak. Her daughter, who she had named after the feeling that haunted her. What a mother I am. Sunburst thought. Suddenly, someone behind her cleared their throat. She wiped her eyes and turned to see Seafoam standing there. She snarled. "What are you doing here?" She said. He hung his head. "Get out!" Sunburst growled. Seafoam took several steps back. Sunburst was on her feet now, sheltering HeartBreak underneath her. The little dragonet whimpered. Sunbursts motherly instincts kicked in, causing her to bend down and give her daughter a reassuring lick. Seafoam stared in shock. Sunburst glowered at him, her gaze hot enough to melt steel. He spread his wings, but right before he took off, HeartBreak peeked her head where Seafoam could see. Sunburst stood tall, defiantly glaring at the dragon she'd loved, at the dragon who'd lied to her. "Go away." She said, her voice low. She sounded dangerous. She would do anything to protect this dragonet, and if that meant kicking out her father, she would do it. Seafoam folded his wings. Sunburst took a step forward. Seafoam met her gaze. "You're kicking me out." He said. Sunburst growled, warning him. He stepped closer. "This is my dragonet too." He said. Tears sprung to Sunbursts eyes. "No." She said. "This is not your dragonet. Because you lied. You don't deserve her." Seafoam looked shocked. Tears slipped down Sunbursts cheeks. "I'm going to ask one last time." She said. "And if you don't go, I'll force you too." Seafoam backed away. "Get out." growled Sunburst menacingly. Seafoam didn't hesitate to take off into the sky. As soon as he was gone, Sunburst collapsed to the ground in a fit of tears. She couldn't take care of this dragonet. She hid her face in her talons, tail wrapped around HeartBreak. Seafoam wasn't the one who didn't deserve this dragonet. Sunburst was. She opened her eyes, blinking the tears away. HeartBreak was curled up, asleep. Sunburst carried her inside, placing her in one of the beds. Then she went outside again to find her previous visitor there again. "What do you want?" She said, her voice tired. Seafoam looked down. "I know you probably don't want this, but it is yours." He slid her ring across the ground. Sunburst almost collapsed again. She picked up the ring, but she didn't put it on. Instead, she went inside and picked up HeartBreak. Setting her down at Seafoams feet, she took a deep breath. "Take her." She said. Seafoam stared in shock. "What?" Sunburst felt tears coming to her eyes. "Take her. To wherever you live. Take her with you." Seafoam blinked at her in confusion. Sunburst took another deep breath. "I said, take her!" She yelled, eyes blurry with pain. Seafoam nodded, picking up HeartBreak. "She belongs with you." She said. Seafoam spread is wings. "And her name is HeartBreak." Sunburst whispered. Seafoam heard it, because he faltered. But only for a moment. And then he was gone.

I have no words. Stay flappy, my crying seals.

SEALPUP You know what I can't finish that sentence. Bye

The Meeting

[image]

This one is from the perspective of HeartBreak, who BTW, had been renamed Sea Star by her dad. It's been two years.

"Dad!" Sea Star complained as Seafoam adjusted the seaflower he'd put in her hair. Sea Star had enchanted it so that it never wilted, and she'd had it for two weeks already. He shushed her. "We're going to an inter-tribal meeting at the Rainforest, so you have to look nice. Sea Star frowned. "How come Queen Sunburst is making us Seawings come?" She asked. Seafoam stiffened at the queens name. "Because." He said. Sunburst had decided to become queen after all. And she swore that she would not have any more affairs. Or dragonets. Sea Star didn't know much about this, but she knew that Sunburst had fallen in love and then given her dragonet to her lying fiance. She didn't want to be that dragonet. Anemone, who had become queen, swept into the room. "Time to go!" She said shrilly. Sea Star rolled her eyes. She thought her Aunt Anemone was a pushover. Seafoam followed the queen, Sea Star behind him. She was more excited than she let on. She wanted to see the Rainforest so bad. And now she was getting to.

~~~
~~~

Sunbursts POV-

Stepping off the platform, Sunburst stretched her wings. Now twelve years old, she was queen and enjoying her life. She'd searched the Seawings, inspecting their group carefully, but she hadn't spotted Seafoam or her daughter. She figured that was a relief. Kiwi looked at her with questioning eyes. Her sister had become one of her greatest companions. Sunburst shrugged. "Same deal as always." She said. Kiwi smiled. "Get to know the peaceful ways of the Rainwings?" She asked. Sunburst sighed. "Not my idea." She replied. Kiwi folded her wings. "So.....You are not at all worried about running into the dragon who broke your heart but you still gave your dragonet too?" She asked. She hit a sore spot. Sunburst had built a wall around that part of her heart, and whenever anyone mentioned her past relationship, she tended to get a little protective. "No. I'm not." She snarled. Kiwi stepped back. "Okay. You should probably go, y'know, mingle?" Sunburst sighed but still went, weaving between the different dragons. Her heart almost stopped when she spotted familiar pale green scales. He's here? She thought. Oh crud. Seafoam looked around, spotting her. She looked away immediately, but he still came over. She tried to smile at him, but she couldn't. "Hey." She said, sitting down and putting her tail over her talons. He swallowed. "Hey." Sunburst tried to sit tall and regal, but seeing this dragon brought back memories, good and bad. She cleared her throat. "How are you?" She asked slowly. He grimaced. "I know you're trying to ask about her." He said. Sunburst nodded. Seafoam looked down. "Sea Star's fine." He said. Sunburst looked at him. "Sea Star?" He nodded. "I thought it would be a better name than HeartBreak." Sunburst felt tears in her eyes. "I'm so sorry." She whispered. "I never should have done what I did. None of it." Seafoam smiled sadly. "Neither should I. But I did. And what's done is done." Sunburst nodded, a single tear sliding down her cheek. Seafoam tentatively stepped forward and wrapped his wings around her. She closed her eyes, feeling just like she had the night she'd told him 'I love you'. She buried herself in his wings, enjoying the feeling of his scales. "I love you still." She whispered, barely audible. But Seafoam heard anyway. "I love you more." He said quietly. "Dad?" Said a confused voice behind them. Sunburst jumped away to see her dragonet. The urge to wrap her in her wings and keep her there forever was almost unbearable. Seafoam swallowed uncomfortably.

"What are you doing?" She asked. Seafoam glanced at Sunburst. "I.." Seafoam had no words. Sunburst stepped forward. "Hello." She whispered. "I'm so, so sorry." Sea Star looked confused. Then her eyes widened. "I remember.....Someone saying that to me.....When I was little." She looked at Sunburst. "You're my..." She trailed off. "Aren't you?" Sunburst nodded, tears flowing freely. Sea Star had tears of her own. "What?" She whispered. "How could you leave me like that? How?" Sunburst hung her head. "I didn't want to, believe me. But it was better if you were raised by your father. Not me." Sea Star back away. "No.." She whispered. She grabbed a pineapple and flung it at her mother, but it stopped halfway. "Seafoam.." Sunburst asked. He stopped it with magic. "Don't blame her. It's my fault. So blame me, and do whatever you want to me. Because I deserve it." Sunburst knew he was talking to her now. She looked at him. "I won't ever leave again." She said. Then she showed him her talon, where the pearly ring was slipped on.

Hi! This one is long, and I realize I have a mean streak. But, now we have a happy family again. So yay! Well, almost. And Sunburst is the QUEEN! DOUBLE YAY!! Stay flappy

SEALPUPPEROUT

Settling In

[image]

Hi guys! Once again, totally random pic. I'm a quote person. Anyway, we are back to happiness! It's been two months since the meeting, everyone has made up, and once again they are living happily ever after in the Rainforest.

Sunburst sat warming her scales on the platform that was part of her home. Being queen left knots all over, the annoyance of having to meet with idiot dragons 24/7. So she loved to spend time alone, getting some sun, whenever she could. She also would spend time with her family. Seafoam and Sea Star were her happily ever after, although before the incident two years ago she had planned to spend it as a high ranking Rainwing, but not a queen. But she was queen now, and Glory was too old to take over again. She could ask Kiwi, but she was settling in to the role of queen, and she didn't want to put that kind of pressure on her eight-year old sister. Seafoam came behind her, twining their tails and sitting next to her, Sunburst folded her wings and leaned into him. A tiny blue head nosed it's way in between them. "Hey!" She said. "No mushy gushy stuff while I'm around." Sea Star demanded. Sunburst laughed at her daughter, but pulled away from Seafoam nonetheless. Sea Star placed herself between them, sitting straight and tall. Like a queen. Sunburst thought. She smiled. She loved being with Seafoam again, especially since she now had Sea Star too. And since she had a new dragonet on the way. They hadn't told Sea Star yet, but they planned too. Eventually. Sea Star grinned at her mother. "I've got a surprise for you." She said. Sunburst looked at her expectantly. Sea Star flipped her tail, and a furry gray bundle plopped onto her head. "I got a sloth." Sea Star proclaimed proudly. Sunburst smiled broadly. "Congrats!" She said. "Have you named it?" Sea Star glared. "It's a he, not an it. And his name is Seagrass." She said. Sunburst sniffed the sloth. "Welcome to the family, Seagrass." She said, scratching the gray ball. Sea Star pranced away to set Seagrass down somewhere, and Sunburst leaned into Seafoam again. "Funny how she named it after something in the ocean." Seafoam said.

Sunburst smiled sadly. "I feel so bad for taking her away from her home, where she grew up." Seafoam kissed the top of her head. "She's alright. I take her to visit every weekend." "And she's so happy!" Sunburst argued. Seafoam sighed. Sunburst curled in closer. She was twining their tails when a sharp pain stabbed through her. She winced, growling. Seafoam looked at her worriedly. "You alright?" He asked. Sunburst nodded, gritting her teeth. Getting to her feet, another pain shot through her like a bullet, causing her to collapse in pain. She stretched out on her side. Seafoam paled a little. "Dragoent?" He said, earning only a growl from Sunburst. The pain wasn't leaving, only getting stronger by the second. Seafoam jumped into the air, grabbing Sea Star and towing her behind him. Sea Star looked confused but went anyway. Sunburst bit her tongue to keep from crying out. Soon, the new medicine dragon Tiki was flying towards. An hour later, Tiki was smiling. But not as much as Sunburst was. She was curled around a pitch black egg that was speckled with red. Seafoam came back, explaining that Sea Star was gathering fruit. His face lit up when he saw the new egg. He went over, looking it up and down and inspecting every inch. "Looks like this one has a bit of Nightwing in her." Sunburst said. Seafoam shrugged. "Only fair that you have one that resembles your side of the family." Sunburst rolled her eyes, then kissed Seafoam long and sweet. "I missed you." She said, in reference to the two years they had spent apart. Seafoam nodded. Then Sea Star plopped down next to him. When she saw the egg, she shrieked loud enough for the whole continent to hear. Two minutes later she was bouncing around saying. "I'm gonna be a big sister. I'm gonna be a big sister." Sunburst laughed. "Glad your excited." Sea Star nodded, then went over and wrapped the egg in a gentle hug. "I love you." She whispered to the egg. After all, she was only two. Sunburst smiled at Seafoam. And he smiled back.

Hi guys! I already have the dragonet picked out, you will ❤ her so much!! Stay flappy!

SEALPUPPEROUT

Eclipse

[image]

Sunburst sat near her egg, watching it closely. She didn't plan on letting anything happen to this little dragonet, so she had stayed near it for two months. Maybe another dragonet wasn't the best idea when you're queen of the Rainwings, but oh well. Sunburst laid her head down on her talons, wrapping her tail around the shining black egg. Closing her eyes, she drifted to sleep without even knowing it. When she opened them again, she noticed something different about the egg. It had cracked open and had fallen onto one side. Sunburst jumped up and raced over, inspecting the egg. It must have hatched while I was asleep. Sunburst thought, looking around the platform. A small black shape was sitting by where she had been sleeping. Scooping up the dragonet, she sniffed her all over. After she was sure the dragonet wasn't hurt, she looked closely at her black scales. She had silver scales scattered across her body, and the undersides of her wings were a fiery orange/red. Sunburst smiled at her new daughter. "Hello Eclipse." She said, using the name she'd picked out. Eclipse sneezed. Sunburst sighed. "Don't inherit Passion's allergies." She said, kissing her dragonets head. A voice came from behind her. Sunburst turned, setting Eclipse down. Seafoam stood looking happy behind her. "What?" Sunburst asked, frowning. Seafoam smiled. "Dragonet." He said. Sunburst grinned, pulling Eclipse towards her and nudging her towards her father. "Go on." She said, pushing her gently with her nose. "Eclipse. He won't hurt you." Seafoam beamed. "Eclipse?" He asked, and Sunburst nodded. Eclipse decided that hearing her name was good enough, then skipped towards him and sprang into the air. Sunburst lurched forward, planning to catch her. But she didn't fall. Born flyer. Sunburst thought proudly. Eclipse fluttered gently towards her father, landing on his back with a snort. Sunburst laughed, Seafoam grinned, and Sea Star jumped out from the bushes and screamed, "ECLIPSE!" Excitedly. Sunburst shushed her, and Sea Star smiled. "Eclipse!" She whispered. Eclipse had fallen asleep on Seafoam's back. Sunburst walked with him as he carried her inside, and Sea Star followed softly. They laid Eclipse down, and she stretched and yawned. Sunburst did the same. Curling up beside her dragonet, she fell asleep with the little red and black lump beside her.

~~~
~~~

Memories

[image]

Hi guys! This one has a time skip to when Eclipse is 3, and Seafoam is 5. And there is a new egg, BTW. Enjoy! This is from Eclipse's POV, and she looks like the pic.

Eclipse looked behind her cautiously. She didn't want to risk being followed. She wasn't going anywhere bad, but she was going somewhere that she didn't want others to find out about. So maybe it was bad. But Eclipse didn't want to think about that. Padding silently along on feather light talons, Eclipse dug her claws into a soft piece of ground that wouldn't show claw marks. Then she sat down to wait. It was excruciating, but Eclipse had been solving her mystery with a partner. So she had to wait. Keeping her claws dug into the ground, Eclipse yawned and laid down her head. It was around midnight, and everyone else was asleep, and Eclipse was tired. Exhausted. She had been doing this every night for a year now, and they still hadn't figured it out. But they had ideas. Eclipse was just closing her eyes when a bright white shape landed a little ways ahead of her. Eclipse lifted her head sleepily. "Took you long enough." She said, yawning and stretching. The newcomer walked over to her in gliding steps, not leaving any trace of him ever being there. He smirked. Eclipse stood up, her claws still dug into the mossy terf. It was the easiest way to wait, keeping herself restrained. Gently pulling her claws one by one from the earth, she followed the other dragon towards the end of the rainforest. Their footsteps were light, not leaving prints or marks behind. No one could no about this. As they reached a dead end, Eclipse took the lead. Standing right by a tall, thick-trunked tree, she straightened her body and slid down a smooth, hidden shoot. She threw her prehensile tail up as she neared the end, pulling herself out and hanging by her tail, which was grasping a smooth wooden bar. Eclipse flipped herself over, then flew to the central platform where several bookshelves were laden with filled scrolls, empty ink pots. Boards that they had built were covered top to bottom in chalk, notes that they had taken. Eclipse turned as an 'off!' sounded behind her. The Icewing had landed in a heap at the end of the tunnel. Eclipse shook her head, then went back to the boards. Taking out an empty scroll, she labeled the date. Three Moons. She put. The she scribbled down another entry in her everlasting diary.

Three Moons

I think I have an idea. What if these memories that I don't remember aren't mine? What if they're someone else's? What if I don't own these memories? I think I might be onto something! I've never been this close to anything, at least related to this. What if this is a breakthrough? I should probably tell Sleet about this. He'd be interested. He's been helping me since the beginning. But it's only a theory, and only I can really discover what this is about. But it's nice to have a partner working with you. Sleet actually seems interested in this mystery, and I appreciate it. But I'm weird. And he shouldn't be hanging around weird dragons. But every time he insists that he doesn't care. Who is this dragon? He must be crazy. Also, he's very warm and friendly for an Icewing. How did we even become friends? I don't know. He just showed up in the Rainforest Kingdom one day and ran into me, and I knew some of his memories, so now he's helping me with the mystery. Funny, right? A Rainwing/ Nightwing/Seawing hybrid working with an Icewing to solve a mystery about a dragon who has dragons memories that she hasn't even met, who is super smart, and could fly right from the moment she was hatched. He has strange taste in friends. I'm going to write my theory on a board, show it to Sleet. I don't know how we can solve this problem, if we ever can, but I know that we can at least figure out what is going on. I'll write again soon, with a new update on my conditions.

-Eclipse

Hi guys! So, what do you think? Eclipse is a super smart three year old dragonet who has dragons who she's never met memories. Weird, right? At the end of the last chapter, she remembered Sea Star teasing other dragons with her appearance when she had only just been born. I think I'm confusing myself. :) Stay flappy!

SEALPUPPEROUT

Explanation Page (No Story)

Hi guys! So I know the last chapter was confusing and so Imma explain it a little.

Eclipse has only met the Rainwings and Nightwings, and one Icewing. But she has the memories of every dragon in Pyrria.

Sea Star is an animus

Sleet is Eclipse's friend who is helping with her explanation

Hope this cleared up a few things!

Stay flappy!

SEALPUPPEROUT

Sleet

[image]

Eclipse sat with her talon on her chin, her face smeared with ink. Sleet sat next to her, looking at the three boards she had covered with theories about her memories. She squinted at one of them. "I don't have the memories all the time." She said, scribbling it onto a fresh board. "Only when I'm near the dragon that owns them." Sleet frowned. "Ok," He said. "Do you have some of my memories right now?" Eclipse nodded absently. "Yes. But they're faint, partly because I have learned how to block some memories, partly because your memories are always around when you are, so I'm used to them." Sleet frowned deeper. "We really need to figure this out, E." He said. "Because this is dangerous." Eclipse looked at him. "I know! Why do you think I do this, and have been doing this for the past year? I know that if I'm interrogated I can give away information from other dragons memories!" Sleet backed up. "Sorry, I know. I just think that maybe we're missing something." Eclipse sighed, yawning. Peeking up the shute, she cursed under her breath. "What?" Eclipse started worming out of the tunnel. "The sun is almost up." She said. Sleet raced towards the shute and gave her a boost. Eclipse pulled Sleet out then bolted home, still light footed. She sprang into the air and grabbed a berry or two on her way home, then landed on the platform and collapsed right on the corner, asleep.

When she woke up, it was late afternoon. Sunburst was sitting with the new egg, eyes closed. Eclipse stood up and stretched, tail swinging back and forth. She dropped off the platform onto a lower tree and climbed deep into the branches, wrapping her tail around one. She shifted her position and a muffled 'Ow!' Came from underneath her. Eclipse jumped back, started. Sleet climbed up so he was face to face with her. She snarled, a headache springing as his memories entered her mind. Sleet frowned. "What are you doing here?" Eclipse demanded. Sleet shrugged. Eclipse paced back and forth, her head aching. She growled. "What?" Sleet asked, looking worried. Eclipse growled again, sitting down. "I think there are a lot of dragons nearby, because there are about a million memories about to split my skull right now." She snarled. Sleet took a step back. "Ok, ok." He said, then took her talon in his own. Eclipse jerked, startled by the contact. Sleet led her out of the tree, stepping carefully onto the platform. Sunburst opened one eye sleepily. "Eclipse is that you?" She asked, then froze when she saw Sleet. Eclipse pulled her talon from his, stepping in front of him with her teeth gritted against the impact of all the memories. Sunburst slowly got up. "Who is this?" She asked, her voice low. Eclipse opened her mouth to speak, but only a growl escaped. Sunburst looked at her. Eclipse shook her head, laying down and clasping her talons onto her horns. Sunburst looked terrified, her scales pale white. She whirled on Sleet. "What did you do to her?" She demanded. Sleet raised his wings in alarm. "I-I didn't do anything, I promise!" Sunburst looked suspicious, but she crouched down near her daughter. Eclipse had tears streaming down her face. She moaned, and SUnburst paled even more. She took a deep breath, then turned to Sleet. "If you let anything happen to her, I will personally tear your throat out." She threatened. Sleet gulped and nodded, standing guard over Eclipse. Sunburst jumped into the air to get Seafoam and Sea Star. Eclipse moaned again, looking at Sleet with pained eyes. She gasped, then forced out five words. "The.....Tribes.....Are.....Coming.....Now!" She cried, then went limp. Sleet flew up and looked over the trees. A group of dragons like none others he had seen before were coming towards them. He raced back down and resumed guard over Eclipse again. She opened her eyes, looking at him. He took her talon in his, giving it a reassuring squeeze. "It'll be alright." He mumbled. Then the dragons were upon them.

Hi guys! This is a confusing chapter, I know, but I hope the last chapter cleared things up. Can you guess who the dragons are? The Pantalan tribes! WOOOO! Stay flappy!

SEALPUPPEROUT

Explanation Page (Again)

Once again, I've got you confused! Sorry guys. Here is a little explanation-

The Pantalan Dragons are coming

Eclipse has the memories of every dragon on the continent so it gets overwhelming

Sleet is her Icewing friend

Starling and all the others will come back in, I promise. Sorry that they haven't been in it much

If you have any questions about the story feel free to ask!

Flappy

Hidden

Sunburst searched frantically for her daughter. Sea Star and Seafoam were searching the Rainforest, Starling and her family searching the Sand Kingdom. Firefly and Kiwi were searching the Nightwing village, asking around. Sunburst slowed her fast breathing. She's got to be around here. She thought, growling. That stupid Icewing!

Eclipse paced back and forth across the Hollow, their hideout. Her head had calmed now that they were underground. Sleet fidgeted with his tail. "Your mom is going to kill me." He said. Eclipse didn't reply. She went to a board and dipped her claw in white ink. Then she called upon the memories of one of the strange dragons.

A blue dragon with teardrop wings smiled nervously. "Come on Blue!" Called the dragon who the memory belonged to. The other dragon, Blue, stepped forward an inch. "I don't know about this Cricket." He said. Cricket laughed. It made Eclipse wonder what Cricket looked like. She was seeing the memory from her eyes. Cricket lunged forward and grabbed Blue's talon. "Don't be a dragonet." She said. "Sundew is waiting for us!" Blue gave in, following Cricket towards a green jungle.

The scene shifted

A bright red cocoon that looked like flaming silk was against one wall of a dark cave. Cricket looked out to show a seashore, the water blue and the sand white. She sighed, and Eclipse could feel her sadness. Suddenly a tearing sound came from behind. Cricket whirled to see a familiar blue talon reaching out. "Come on, Blue." She urged. The dragon from before, Blue, stepped out and flexed magnificent wings. Cricket let out a happy sigh. Then she tacked Blue in a hug, wrapping her wings around him and twining their tails. "I've missed you." She whispered. Blue pressed his snout to hers. "I've missed you too." He said. Eclipse felt a powerful surge of some emotion, an emotion that was familiar to Eclipse. She felt it every time she looked at Sleet. Love. She realized. Cricket untangled herself from Blue. They began talking about dragons named Sundew and Luna, and one named Swordtail. It didn't make sense to Eclipse, so she finally retreated from Crickets memories.

Sleet was looking at her with a worried expression. "What?" Eclipse asked, blushing a little. Now that she knew that she really loved Sleet, it felt strange talking to him. He sighed with relief. "You've been sitting there with your eyes closed for two hours." He said. "I was starting to worry something had gone wrong." Eclipse got up in one smooth move and pressed her snout to Sleets. "I'm fine." She said. "I promise." Sleet gulped, his eyes staring at Eclipses snout. They weren't kissing, but it was still a large sign of affection. Eclipse pulled away. She kept a cool, calm expression, but she was starting to panic. Did Sleet not like her that way? She hoped that wasn't it. He looked shocked, dazed, and a little giddy. Eclipse turned back to the board and sketched an image of the dragon she had seen in the memories. She had inherited her father's skill with art. Sleet looked at it with an awed expression. "What is that?" He asked. Eclipse shrugged. "A dragon. What kind, I don't know. But we can find out." She gestured towards the exit of the Hollow. Sleet shook his head. "I'd rather stay down here." He said, then, much quieter, added. "With you." Eclipse froze. Was she really doing this? She was a serious dragonet, one who did not deal with romance and love and heart. But Sleet was an exception to those rules. Eclipse leaned in. Sleet hesitated, then did the same. He connected their snouts, but Eclipse went further, connecting their lips. Sleet didn't pull away. Instead, he kissed Eclipse back. When she pulled away, her eyes were shining and she felt like nothing she had ever felt before. She grinned. "If my mom finds out about this, she really is going to kill you."

Fallen In Love

[image]

Hi guys! I'm sorry I haven't updated in a while. But I'm making it up to you! Enjoy!

Eclipse sat in front of a board in the Hollow, examining the sketch of the mystery dragon she had done. Sleet had gone, and Eclipse was lonely. She had gone up after Sleet left, assured her frantic mother she was fine, and then came back down for a breath. Sleet had promised he'd be back soon, but Eclipse was still impatient. She had considered looking at memories again, but she decided against it. She could get lost in it. When the sound of scales sliding on the walls of the tunnel started, Eclipse turned anxiously. Sleet slid out a moment later, landing on his feet but sliding and ending up falling on his snout. Eclipse grinned. Just seeing Sleet made her happy, happier than she thought she could be. The kiss had been three days ago, and Eclipse and Sleet had said no words, but the fact that they were now boyfriend and girlfriend needed none. Eclipse bounded over and twined her tail with his, leaning into him. Sleet smiled at her. "Good morning." He said, putting a wing around Eclipse. She jerked away a little. "You're freezing!" She said. Sleet shrugged. "I just came back from the Ice Kingdom." He said. "I have to stay cold somehow." Eclipse just curled up next to Sleet. He sighed contentedly. "So you really don't like the cold?" Sleet asked. Eclipse shrugged. "It's fine." Silence again. "You know," Eclipse said. "I think that I'm in love." Sleet grinned. "Oh yeah? With who?" He asked teasingly. Eclipse slapped him lightly. "With you, idiot." She said softly. "I love you." Sleet touched his snout to hers. "I love you too." He said. Eclipse felt like she could fly forever after hearing those words.I love you too. She would never forget this day. Eclipse stood up. "Do you wanna go flying?" She asked. Sleet stood up too. "I'd love too." He said. Eclipse raced out the entrance to the hollow, springing into the air and waiting as Sleet bounded after her. She laughed, twirling herself around him as they flew. She was happier than she had ever been before, and her heart felt light as air. But also heavy as stone. Because her mother would not allow them to see each other if she found out. So meeting in the Hollow was the only way. Sleet looked at her. "You okay?" He asked. Eclipse nodded absently. "Yeah, yeah. I'm fine." She said. Sleet frowned, like he knew that Eclipse wasn't paying attention. "You sure?" He asked. Eclipse nodded. She looked at Sleet, who flew over and wrapped her in his wings, forming a wall around the two dragons. Then he kissed her. Eclipse lingered in the kiss for a long time before pulling away and spreading her wings. I am never leaving this dragon. Eclipse thought. Sleet looked dazed, veering off to one side. Eclipse nudged him. "Come on." She said, and launched into a steep dive. Sleet followed close behind. Eclipse pulled up at the last second, dragging the tip of one wing across the hot sand of the Sand Kingdom. She laughed, happy and excited and finally free to fly without worrying. Sleet stopped and landed, motioning for her to do the same. Eclipse yanked her wings up, prepping to land when she slammed into a tan dragon. She stumbled back, flexing her wings and claws. The dragon was a tall Sandwing with a bandana around her neck and a bandage on one horn. "Who are you?" She demanded. Eclipse crouched low. "I'm Eclipse." She said. The Sandwing studied her, then looked at Sleet. "Why are you with an Icewing?" She said, eyes slits. Sleet padded up nervously. Eclipse straightened. "That is none of your concern." She said. The Sandwing regarded her with black eyes. Then she laughed. "You're brave." She said. "Where are you from?" Eclipse took a deep breath. "I'm from the Rainforest." She said. The Sandwing looked sceptical. "Who are your parents?" She asked. Eclipse sighed. "My mother is Queen Sunburst of the Rainwings." She said. The Sandwing jerked back a little. "Sunburst is your mother?" She said. Eclipse nodded. "I know Sunburst! We went to JMA together. We were in the same winglet." She smiled. "I'm Scorpion, by the way." Eclipse smiled. "Why are you out here with an Icewing? Does your mother know about this?" Scorpion asked. Eclipse said nothing. "I'm guessing no." Scorpion said. "Please don't tell my mother!" Eclipse pleaded. Scorpion laughed. "I'm not gonna tell, I promise. Just get back to your home as fast as you can." Eclipse spread her wings and jumped into the air, thanking Scorpion and heading back to the rainforest. Sleet went to the Ice Kingdom. "Tell your mother I said hi!" Said Scorpion, and then Eclipse was out of earshot.

Hi guys!! I hope you liked it, because the next chapter is gonna be kind of a downer. (Sorry) Anywho, there's going to be a timeskip, just warning you, and the next few chapters are going to be a little sad. Stay flappy!

SEALOUT

I can't

[image]

Hi guys!! This chapter is going to be a sad one, and the next is too, sorry. This one has a time skip, Eclipse and Sleet are now 9. Enjoy! (Also the pic is totally random I'm a quote person :)

Eclipse sat on a suntime platform, her wings spread. Soaking up the warm sunshine, she closed her eyes. She was waiting for Sleet, and decided to get a little sun while she could. The bright orange undersides of her wings seemed to glow when the sun hit them. A sudden cold appeared next to her, and she opened her eyes to see Sleet copying her. She shoved him and jumped off the platform, soaring down to the rainforest floor. Sleet followed, twining their tails along the way. He seemed excited, but also nervous. Eclipse walked towards the entrance to the Hollow, which had become a favorite spot of theirs. Sliding down into the underground room, she landed gracefully like she always did with a flourish of her wings. Even in the few years that had passed, nothing had changed much. Sleet was still landing on his nose when he slid down, and the two were still in love. Sleet managed to land on his feet, and he stayed up. Eclipse looked at him in surprise. He shrugged. He came and sat down next to Eclipse, twining their tails. She leaned into him, shivering slightly. "Why are your scales always so cold?" Eclipse asked. Sleet laughed. "I am an Icewing." He said. "But you spend most of your time in the rainforest!" Eclipse protested. Sleet looked at her. "Just because you're here." He said. She blushed. Sleet took a deep breath. "Hey, Eclipse." He said. Eclipse looked at him, catching his eye. "Yeah?" She replied. "You know I love you, right?" Eclipse nodded. "I love you too." She said. Sleet continued. "I love you more than anything else, and I want to love you forever." Eclipse gasped. "You mean-" She said. Sleet nodded. "You are the most wonderful dragon in the world, so I have to ask. Will you marry me?" Eclipse felt tears springing to her eyes. She didn't say anything for a long moment, then quietly whispered, "No." Sleet looked confused. Then he looked hurt. Eclipse felt hot tears slip down her cheeks. "I really want to." She said, reaching for Sleet's talon. "But I can't." Sleet jerked his talon away, not meeting her eyes. "Why not?" He asked quietly. Eclipse took a shaky breath. "I can't risk it." She said. "I can't risk our dragonets inheriting this horrible, terrible power that I have." Sleet looked at her, tears brimming in his bright eyes, that were now dull. He nodded slowly. "I understand." He said, and then he was gone. Eclipse sat down hard, wrapping herself in her wings and wishing she had Sleet there with her. "What have I done?" She said miserably to herself. A pair of wings wrapped around her comfortingly, and she turned hopefully. It wasn't Sleet, but her mother. Eclipse felt fresh tears form, and she collapsed into her mother's embrace. "I messed up." She said. "I really did." Sunburst stroked her daughter's head consolingly, whispering comforting words. Eclipse looked helplessly up at her. "Did I do the right thing?" She asked. Sunburst kissed her daughters head. "I think so." She said. She hugged her heartbroken daughter tightly, rocking back and forth. Endless tears slid down Eclipse's face, landing in a puddle on the floor. Sleet was flying as fast as he could back to the Ice Kingdom, scolding himself for falling in love with a Rainwing. He really had loved her though, and he still did. Eclipse wished she could see him again, or go back in time and make it different. But it was too late, and two simple words had ruined it. 'I can't.'

Hi guys! I'm being mean to you, I know. I'm being mean to me too! The next chapter I really think you are going to hate, and you'll probably hate me for it, but please forgive me. Stay flappy!

SEALOUT

Gone

[image]

Hi guys! This chapter is kind of evil. (😈) Enjoy! (Though you probably won't)

Eclipse sat in the Hollow, reliving memories. She hadn't been down here much since the proposal, because it stirred up too many painful memories. She had been down much more often now though, because of a little secret she had. It had been three months since the proposal, and Eclipse had tried not to think about it. It was easier than she thought, because she had something else to keep her busy. She was waiting for an egg. She'd found out a week or so after the proposal, and had been anxiously awaiting the arrival of the egg. She had debated telling Sleet several times, but had decided against it several times. Eclipse did feel a little guilty, but she couldn't worry about that much. She came down to the Hollow everyday, wanting it to be the place where her egg hatched, even though it would be a while. She closed her eyes, wings folded neatly, and was relaxing more than she had in months when a scraping sound came from the entrance to the Hollow. She spun around, looking for the intruder. When she spotted the dragon, it wasn't an intruder at all. It was Sleet. He looked at her, obviously surprised to find her here. Eclipse stood up and slowly began to walk towards him, feeling a tear slip down her cheek. "Hi." She said. "Hi." Sleet replied. Eclipse kept walking forward, until she was close enough to reach out and touch him. Sleet sat down. Eclipse felt another tear, and another, until there was a flow of tears. She crept closer still, until she finally threw herself into Sleet's wings. He wrapped his wings around her, holding her tightly. Eclipse cried, but this time her tears were relieved. She looked up at Sleet. "I love you." She said. "I'll love you forever." Sleet looked down at her with love in his eyes. "I love you too." He said quietly. "More than anything else." Eclipse leaned forward. She kissed Sleet, so happy to be with the dragon she loved again. She pulled away gently, leaning into Sleet. He twined their tails, and Eclipse held his talon. Suddenly, a sharp jab of pain shot through her. She yelped. Sleet looked at her worriedly. "Are you ok?" He asked. Eclipse grit her teeth as another wave of pain went through her. She stretched out on her side, looking at Sleet with a scared expression. Sleet's eyes widened with realization, and he paled. "I'll go get the healer." He said, preparing to take off. Eclipse grabbed his talon. "Don't leave me." She whispered. He nodded, giving her talon a reassuring squeeze. "I won't." He promised. Eclipse growled as pain sliced through her. Sleet held onto her talon tightly, his scales whiter than normal. Soon, a pretty white egg with a splash of bright orange on the top arrived, but Eclipse wasn't moving to curl herself around it. Sleet nudged her gently, and she opened her eyes slowly. She smiled weakly at Sleet, giving his talon one last squeeze. "Take good care of her." She whispered. "I love you." And then she was still. Sleet searched frantically for a sign that she was still breathing, that she was holding on, but there was nothing. She was gone. Sleet wrapped himself around the pretty egg, promising himself that he wouldn't let anything happen to this dragonet. She would grow up without a mother. Sleet left the egg for a moment and went to get the healers. He brought them to the Hollow, showing them Eclipse, silently pleading that she wouldn't be dead. A purple and blue Rainwing shook her head. Sleet bowed his head, tears sliding down his face. The healers left, and a moment later Sunburst arrived, looking first at the pretty white egg, then at the grieving Sleet. "Oh no." She whispered. She went and laid next to her daughter, her scales black as night. Sunburst turned to Sleet, opening her wings and wrapping them around him. "I loved her." Sleet said quietly, his voice shaky. Sunburst nodded. "I know." She said. Then she turned her attention to the egg. "Where will you go?" She asked. Sleet blinked. "I'm staying here." He said. "At least for a little while." He was quiet for a moment, then spoke again. "Do you think I could have saved her?" He asked quietly. Sunburst smiled sadly. "I don't think anyone could've." She said softly. "Come on." She led him away from Eclipse. "Let's get you into the sun."

Hi guys! I'm sorry, but this had to be done. (There must be some major drama between the couples.) Don't worry, things will brighten up, I promise. Stay flappy! (Though I doubt you want to)

SEALOUT

Going Home

[image]

Hi guys! You're probably really mad at me, but don't worry, it gets better! Just not quite yet. This one is all about Sleet. Enjoy!

Sleet glided through the air, the pretty white egg clutched carefully in his talons. He had stayed in the Rainforest for almost two weeks, but soon he had to leave and go back home, and he wasn't leaving the egg behind. The snow covered ground of the Ice Kingdom came into view, cold wind brushing against Sleet's scales. He breathed deeply. As he flew over the Ice Kingdom, he dove down towards the ground and landed, walking a few steps before stopping to check on the egg. The white surface seemed to glow, and the spot of orange looked like a star. Sleet picked up the egg and launched into the air again.

Two guards met Sleet at the entrance, letting him in once they saw who it was. They looked with interested eyes at the egg, but Sleet ignored their stares. This was the part he had been dreading. His family was going to tease him nonstop, like they always did. Touching down next to his home, he found his two brothers and sister inside. They turned when they heard the familiar scraping of his talons against the hard floor. Avalanche, his oldest brother, turned. "Welcome back." He said. Snowstorm, his younger sister, bounded over to give him a hug. Snowstorm was the nice one of his siblings. Nix, his other brother, sneered. "Did your girlfriend dump you?" He asked. Sleet stiffened. Nix grinned wickedly. "So she did?" He snarled. Snowstorm jumped in front of Nix. "Stop it, will you?" She said. She turned to Sleet. "Why haven't you ever brought Eclipse here?" She asked. Sleet swallowed hard. "Never got the chance." He said. Snowstorm smiled. "Well, you could bring her now." She suggested, but Sleet shook his head. "I can't." He said. Snowstorm frowned. "Why not?" Sleet looked at the ground. "Because she's dead." He said quietly. Snowstorm's expression melted to one of sympathy. "I'm sorry." She said, wrapping her wings around her older brother. Avalanche's expression softened, as did Nix's. Sleet showed them the pretty white egg with the splash of orange, and Snowstorm gasped and hugged it too. "You poor little thing." She whispered to the egg. Sleet smiled.

When night fell, Sleet let Snowstorm sleep with the egg, partly because she wouldn't stop pestering him about it, and partly because he knew he could trust her. His siblings were sleeping inside, but Sleet sat outside with his wings open, like Eclipse used to do. He realized how desperately he wanted her company, for her to be right there, leaning against him. He could almost feel her warm scales against his own cold ones. He sighed, going back inside to see his sister curled around the egg, her wings folded protectively over it. He smiled, touching the orange spot on the egg before settling himself down in front of it. He may not have Eclipse anymore, but he did have his family. And for the moment, that was all he could ask for.

Hi guys! I know this chapter was kinda short, but I really want to get to the next one! :)

Stay flappy!

SEALOUT

Sunstar

Hi guys! So, this is a good chapter, we're going back into happy stuff!!!!!! Enjoy!

Sleet sat vigilantly by the egg, watching a crack that had appeared a few minutes ago. He watched expectantly, waiting for the little dragonet. Soon, the crack grew bigger and bigger until the entire top popped off. A little white head poked out, looking around. Sleet immediately felt love for this tiny little dragon. He reached in and pulled out the dragonet, letting it sit on his talon. She was all white, like her father, except for a spot on her back, where a bright orange spot that looked like a star was. The orange color stretched onto her wings a little, getting lighter and lighter until it was back to pure white. The little dragon waved her tail back and forth. looking at her surroundings. Sleet set her down on the ground. The little dragonet began to walk around, stumbling and wobbling, but soon enough getting the hang of it and running around. Sleet laughed as he watched her. Snowstorm walked in a moment later, shaking the snow off her scales. "It's horrible out-" She stopped when she spotted the little dragonet racing around. "Awwwww!" She squealed, scooping up the little dragon and examining her. Snowstorm looked at Sleet. "Look at how cute she is!" She exclaimed. "Have you named her yet?" Sleet shook his head, and Snowstorm thought for a moment. "How about Luna?" She suggested. "Ooh, or Polar?" Sleet shook his head again. "I'm still thinking." He said. Snowstorm shrugged. "Ok." She said. "You do that, and I'll hang out with my new niece!" Snowstorm placed the dragonet on her hand and began marching around, causing the little dragon to laugh. Sleet sat down and watched fondly as his sister played with his new daughter. His heart gave a pang as he thought about Eclipse, how that could be her playing with their dragonet. As if her voice was whispering to him, a name bounced around in his head. He gestured to Snowstorm, and she came over with the dragonet still balanced on her head. Sleet lifted her off and held her, smiling. "I have a name." He said. Snowstorm tilted her head inquiringly. "What is it?" She asked. Sleet looked at the little dragon that was his family now. "Sunstar." He said, and the little dragon smiled. Snowstorm laughed. "I think she likes it." She said. Sleet nodded. "I think she does." He said. "And I think Eclipse would too." He added quietly. Snowstorm nodded. "I think so." She said, hugging her brother and niece. Sunstar looked up at Sleet, her eyes just like Eclipse's. "I'm not going to let anything happen to you." He promised his daughter. Snowstorm left the new family and went back outside,keeping Nix and Avalanche away for a while. Sleet laid down, and Sunstar laid beside him, falling asleep with her tail next to his. Sleet watched her with fond eyes, still not believing that this was his daughter. And that Eclipse wouldn't get to meet her. Sleet sighed happily, placing a wing over Sunstar. She curled closer to Sleet, the sound of small snores filling the room. Sleet smiled, feeling like he could never be unhappy again. But when thoughts of Eclipse came up, he knew that wasn't true. But for now, he could enjoy the moment of happiness he had.

Hi!! I picked out the dragonets name a while ago, and I'm so glad I got to use it!! I hope you liked it, the chapters will be happy now. Stay flappy!

SEALOUT

Adventure

Hi guys! Sorry I haven't updated in a while, I was on a trip until wednesday. Enjoy!

Sunstar stalked quietly along, her tail moving back and forth and her wings twitching with excitement. Sleet sat in front of her, completely oblivious to the attack that was coming. Sunstar grinned wickedly, spreading her wings and jumping, gliding through the air before coming to a stop on Sleet's back. She landed with a growl, digging her razor sharp claws into his scales. He laughed, pulling her off. She kicked and snarled, the fiercest dragon to ever roam Pyrrhia. Sleet set her down, keeping one talong on her tail, pinning her down. "Your claws are still dull." He said. "You haven't defeated me yet." Sunstar growled. "I will." She said confidently. "Just you watch me." Sleet removed his talon from her tail and let her go, scooping her up into a hug. "Dad!" Sunstar protested, wriggling free. Sleet laughed at his adventurous daughter. She was a year old now, and her spirit had only grown. A few days ago he had caught her sneaking up on Nix, which wouldn't have ended well. And he had seen her stalking a rabbit, trying to blend in with the snow. But her orange mark gave her away everytime. Sunstar had gotten very annoyed with her spot, trying to coat herself in snow or crawl forward on her back so it didn't show. She ran off with her wings tucked at her sides. Snowstorm was waiting outside home when Sunstar got there. "Come here, you." She said, hugging her niece. "Did you defeat him yet?" Sunstar sniggled close to her aunt. "Not yet." She said. "But I almost left a dent in one of his scales!" Snowstorm laughed. Sunstar loved her aunt. She played with Sunstar, made time for her whenever she needed it. Worming her way out of her aunts grasp, Sunstar padded off towards the entrance to the Ice Kingdom. "Where are you going?" Snowstorm called after her. Sunstar turned. "I'm going on an adventure." She said, taking off into the air. She soared out of the Ice Kingdom, already knowing where she wanted to go. When the scorching hot sands of the desert came into view, she slowly drifted down to the ground, landing on the yellow sand. Steam rose where her icy cold talons touched the hot sand. Walking along the Sand Kingdom, Sunstar looked around, spotting cacti and a few lizards. When a particularly large lizard came into view, Sunstar dropped low to the ground and began to prowl forward, keeping her wings still. The lizard turned it's head her way, then went back to being completely still. Sunstar prepared to pounce, and was just about to leap when-"What are you doing?" She whirled with her teeth bared and spines bristling. A small Sandwing stood behind her. He threw up his wings when she turned, taking a step back. "I'm hunting a lizard." She said matter-of-factly. "Can't you tell?" The Sandwing cocked his head. "Not really." He said. Sunstar glared. "Who are you?" She asked warily. The Sandwing sat down and put his tail over his talons. "Mirage, at your service." He said, flicking his tail. Sunstar stepped a little closer, slowly circling the Sandwing. He looked at her. "And you are?" He prompted, flicking his tail yet again. Sunstar flinched as the barb at the came close to touching her. "Sunstar." She said. "Not that it's any of your business." Mirage flicked his tail again. "Actually, it kind of is." He said. Sunstar gave him a confused look. "How so?" She said. Mirage flicked his tail, and Sunstar twitched her wing irritatedly. "I'm a Sandwing." He said. "I live here. You're an Icewing, so you're an intruder." Sunstar tensed. Mirage hopped up. "But don;t worry." He said brightly. "I won't tell them you were even here." Sunstar looked at him sideways, noticing peculiar silver scales on the undersides of his wings. "What are those?" She asked curiously. Mirage blushed. "Technically, I'm part Nightwing." He said, embarrassed. "But you can't tell other than those!" He said. Sunstar tilted herself to the side so he could see her orange spot. "I'm part Nightwing." She said. "And part Rainwing. And part Seawing." Mirage looked confused. "How?" He asked. Sunstar sighed. "My great grandmother is Glory of the Rainwings. My grandmother is Sunstar, so my aunt is Queen Sea Star, and my grandfather is Seafoam. My great grandfather is Deathbringer, who is a Nightwing, and my father is an Icewing." Mirage looked extremely confused as he tried to comprehend what Sunstar had said. "So...you're Rainwing royalty?" He asked. Sunstar shrugged. "Technically, yes." Mirage brightened. "I'm Sandwing royalty." He said. Sunstar looked at him expectantly. "My mother is Queen Scorpion." He said. "So I'm the Sandwing prince." Sunstar nodded. "Who's your father?" She asked. "DreamEnder." Mirage answered, flicking his tail. Sunstar frowned. "Why do you keep flicking your tail like that?" SHe asked, and Mirage blushed. "It's just a habit." He said. "I can't help it." Sunstar shrugged. "Ok." She said. Then she grinned as an idea came to mind. "Be back here tomorrow at the same time, same place." She said, starting to walk away. "Why?" Mirage asked. Sunstar looked at him. "Because we're friends." She said.

Hi guys!! I've wanted to bring in Mirage for a while, so here he is!! I hope you like it!! Stay flappy!

SEALOUT

Mirage

HI guys!!! This is the last ship in this story, and the last chapter. (Sorry) I'm always taking requests for new ships!! Enjoy!

Sunstar raced along the sandy terf, kicking up dust behind her. Her white scales were streaked with tan, and grains of sand were wedged between her scales. It had been three years since her and Mirage had met, and their friendship had only grown. Mirage came up beside her, his wings folding. "You cheated!" Sunstar yelled over the sound of their talons pounding the ground. Mirage grinned. "Did not!" He yelled back, pushing himself faster. "You flew!" Sunstar said, spreading her own wings and gliding a few steps. "So did you!" He retorted. Sunstar snorted. "Just because you did." She replied. Mirage jumped into the air, climbing high. Sunstar looked down and saw a white line, growling slightly before flying after her friend. He had already made it very high, and began to swoop into a steep dive. Sunstar pushed her wings harder, following just a moment behind him. They pulled up at the last second, their wings creating waves of sand. Touching down and beginning to run again, Sunstar pulled in front of Mirage and passed over a green line a second before he did. She collapsed, panting hard. "I...win.....again." She said breathlessly. Mirage frowned, flopping onto his side. "Sure." He said. Sunstar stood up and shook the sand off her wings, her tail swishing back and forth. The game they were playing was a mix of tag and obstacle course. First you had to tag the other player, then start a race to the white line. From there you would fly until the top of a sand hill that had taken hours to build before diving back down and running until you pass the green line. Whoever passes first wins. Sunstar had won every game three years in a row, and she was not going to lose her streak. She trotted off towards the sand hill, which had grown hard as rock. Spreading her wings and flying to the top, she looked out over the Sand Kingdom. Mirage had given her a tour a month after they became friends.

"Come on." He said, walking away. Sunstar followed. "Where are we going?" She asked, and Mirage smiled. "To my home." He said. "I'm giving you a tour." Sunstar grinned. "Great." She said. "Take it away." Mirage took her around Possibility, showing her the different shops and the best places to find lizards. Then he took her to the palace, where the queen was waiting. "Who's this?" She asked with a smile. Mirage introduced his friend. "This is Sunstar." He said. Queen Scorpion flicked her tail. "Nice to meet you, Sunstar." She said, then squinted. "You look familiar.....have we met before?" Sunstar shook her head. "Not that I know of." She answered politely. Queen Scorpion thought for a moment. "Who are your parents?" She asked. "My father is Sleet." She answered. "And my mother was Eclipse." Scorpion gasped. "Eclipse?" She said. "I've met her before." Sunstar brightened. "You have?" She said, excited. "Can you tell me what she was like?" She asked hopefully. Scorpion frowned. "What do you mean? Don't you know her?" Sunstar looked down at the ground. "She died before I hatched." She said solemnly. Scorpion wrapped her wings around the grieving dragonet. "She was wonderful." She said quietly. "Just like you."

From that moment on, Queen Scorpion became like a mother to Sunstar, and her and Sleet visited often. Mirage climbed up and sat next to her on the sand hill. "You okay?" He asked, nudging her. Sunstar looked at him. "Yeah, I'm good." She said. "Just thinking." "About what?" Mirage asked. Sunstar shrugged. "Just.....stuff." She said vaguely. She slowly leaned on Mirage, twining her tail with his. He tensed for a moment, then relaxed and placed a gentle wing over her. "Mir?" Sunstar looked at him. He looked at her. "Yeah?" He asked. Sunstar took a deep breath. "I love you." She said quietly. Mirage smiled, touching her snout with his own. "I love you too." He said.

Hi guys!!!!!!!!!! I LOVE THIS SHIP SO MUCH! SO MUCH. Anywho, I hope you liked it!!

The Final Part

Hey guys!! This is the last part in 'Glorybringer Oneshot.' I had a great time writing this, and I'm super thankful for all of you who read it!!! I never expected it to go this well. I'm always open to new suggestions for one shots that you'd like me to do. Again, thank you for all the support!!!

Here is a family tree of this story, including Sunstar and Mirage's dragonets-

Glory and Deathbringer-

Sunburst, Kiwi and Firefly, Passionfruit

Sunburst and Seafoam-

Sea Star, Eclipse

Eclipse and Sleet-

Sunstar

Sunstar and Mirage-

Desert Lily

Snowdrift

Eclipse

Thank you for reading! Stay flappy!